License Agreement

AGREEMENT of license under copyright made in one or more counterparts between , a corporation (hereinafter referred to as the Distributor), party of the first part, and the Exhibitor, (hereinafter named and referred to as the Exhibitor, operating the theatre hereinafter designated), party of the second part,

WITNESSETH: The parties hereto agree as follows:

License

FIRST: The Distributor grants the Exhibitor and the Exhibitor accepts, a limited license under the respective copyrights of the motion pictures designated and described in the Schedule hereof and under the copyright of any matter included in any sound recorded therewith, to exhibit publicly said motion pictures and to reproduce for public performances such recorded sound in synchronism therewith, but only at the said theatre for the number of consecutive days specified in the Schedule and for no other use or purpose; provided that the reproducing equipment in the said theatre will operate reliably and efficiently to reproduce such recorded sound with adequate volume and high quality; and provided further that if copyrighted musical compositions are included in such recorded sound, the Exhibitor will have at the date or dates of the exhibition of each of such motion pictures a license from the copyright proprietor thereof or from any licensee of such copyright proprietor to perform publicly the said copyrighted musical compositions. If more than one theatre is hereinafter designated the said motion pictures are licensed for exhibition at only one of such theatres unless otherwise in the Schedule specifically provided in writing.

Term and Warranty

SECOND: (a) The term of this Agreement shall begin with the date fixed or determined for the exhibition at the said theatre of the first motion picture deliverable hereunder and shall continue for a period of one year thereafter unless otherwise in the Schedule provided. The Distributor agrees during said term to deliver to the Exhibitor, and the Exhibitor agrees to exhibit at said theatre during said term upon the date or dates herein provided for, a positive print of each of said motion pictures except such as may be excluded as provided in Clauses Fifteenth and Seventeenth hereof. The Distributor warrants that each positive print will be in good physical condition for projection and exhibition, and will clearly reproduce the recorded sound in synchronism therewith if properly used upon standard reproducing equipment. If the recorded sound is not recorded upon a print, all references herein to a print shall be deemed to include the records, discs and any other device upon which sound may be recorded for reproduction with the exhibition of a print.

Damages—Failure to Deliver

(b) If the Distributor shall fail or refuse to deliver, or the Exhibitor shall fail or refuse to exhibit during the term hereof, any of said motion pictures, excepting those which may be eliminated as provided in Clause Fifteenth hereof, and those which may not be generally released as provided in Clause Seventeenth hereof or if the Distributor shall wilfully violate any of the provisions of Clause Seventh hereof or shall deliver to the Exhibitor a print of any motion picture which print shall be determined was not in condition for exhibition and for the reproduction of sound as provided in Clause Second, the Exhibitor or the Distributor, as the case may be, shall pay the damage so caused and if such damage cannot be definitely computed shall pay as liquidated damages a sum equal to the fixed sum herein specified as the rental of each such motion picture or a sum computed as provided in Clause Third (c) hereof, if the rental of any such motion picture is to be determined, either in whole or in part, upon a percentage of the admission receipts of said theatre or any part thereof or upon a percentage of such receipts and a fixed sum; provided that any claim by the Exhibitor with respect to the condition of a print shall be deemed to have been waived by the Exhibitor unless notice of such claim shall have been given by the Exhibitor to the Distributor's exchange from which the Exhibitor is served, by telephone or telegraph, or in person, immediately after the first public exhibition thereof by the Exhibitor and written confirmation thereof mailed by the Exhibitor upon the same day to the Distributor's said exchange.

Payment

THIRD: (a) Exhibitor agrees to pay for such license as to each such motion picture the fixed sums specified in the Schedule at least three (3) days in advance of the date of delivery of a print thereof at the Distributor's exchange or of the date of shipment to the Exhibitor's from another Exhibitor, unless after the acceptance of this application by the Distributor such payment shall be otherwise agreed to by the Distributor in writing signed by an officer of the Distributor. All payments hereunder shall be made to the Distributor at the City in which is located the exchange from which the Exhibitor is served.

Percentage Bookings

(b) If the rental of any of such motion pictures is to be determined either in whole or in part upon the admission receipts of said theatre or any part thereof, the Exhibitor agrees to pay such rental immediately after the last exhibition upon the last date of the exhibition of each such motion picture or if requested by the Distributor at the end of each day's exhibition. In each such case the Exhibitor shall deliver to the Distributor immediately after the last exhibition upon each date of exhibition of each such motion picture a correct itemized statement of the gross receipts of said theatre for admission thereto upon each such date. Such statement shall be signed by the Exhibitor or the Manager or Treasurer of said theatre and the Cashier thereof and shall include a statement of such facts and figures as may be provided in the Schedule to be furnished by the Exhibitor, and if requested by the Distributor, shall be made upon forms furnished by the Distributor. Upon the exhibition date or dates of each motion picture an authorized representative of the Distributor is hereby given the right to verify the sale of all tickets for admission to said theatre, and the receipts therefrom; and for such purpose shall have access to the theatre, including the box office, and also the right to examine all relevant entries relating to such gross receipts in all the Exhibitor's books and records, and if hereunder it is provided that the Exhibitor make certain expenditures and/or deductions, to examine all entries relating to such expenditures and/or deductions. Such right of access and examination of the Exhibitor's books and records limited as aforesaid, shall continue for a period of four (4) months after the receipt by the Distributor of each such statement. The Distributor agrees, unless such representative is in the continuous employ of the Distributor or employed as a checker, not to employ as a representative for such purpose any person a resident of or employed in the place where the said theatre is located, other than a person engaged in business as an accountant. The Distributor agrees that any information obtained pursuant to the provisions of this clause will be treated as confidential, excepting in any arbitration proceeding or litigation in respect to this license.

Liquidated Damages—Percentage Bookings

(c) If the Exhibitor fails or refuses to exhibit any of said motion pictures as herein provided and the rental or any part thereof is to be computed in whole or in part upon a percentage of the admission receipts of said theatre, the Exhibitor shall pay the Distributor as liquidated damages for each day the Exhibitor fails or refuses to exhibit such motion pictures, in addition to any fixed sums payable hereunder in respect of such motion picture, a sum equal to such percentage of the average daily gross receipts of such theatre on each date any feature motion picture distributed by the Distributor was exhibited thereat during the period of ninety (90) days prior to the date or dates when said motion picture should have been so exhibited hereunder, or if no feature motion picture distributed by the Distributor was exhibited at such theatre during said ninety day period, then a sum equal to such percentage of the average daily gross receipts of such theatre during the period of thirty operating days immediately prior to the date or dates when such motion pictures should have been exhibited, or prior to the date of such failure or refusal to exhibit any of said motion pictures; provided that if the Exhibitor shall exhibit such motion pictures for less than the full number of days provided for in the Schedule, for each day less than said full number of days, the sum equal to such percentage shall be computed upon a sum equal to sixty-five (65%) of the gross receipts of said theatre during the last day of the exhibition whereat of such motion picture. A sworn statement of the said daily gross receipts shall be delivered by the Exhibitor to the Distributor upon demand therefor.

Deliverv and Return of Prints

FOURTH: (a) After each of said motion pictures is generally released for public exhibition and beaomes available for exhibition hereunder by the Exhibitor, the Distributor agrees to deliver as hereinafter provided, a print thereof to the Exhibitor.

(b) The public exhibition of any of said motion pictures for three (3) consecutive days at prices usually charged for admission to the theatre where so exhibited in the territory wherein is located the exchange from which the Exhibitor is served, excepting any "road show," "tryout," "preview," or "pre-release" exhibitions thereof, shall be deemed the general release for public exhibition of such motion picture but only in such territory. A "pre-release" exhibition shall be deemed any exhibition because of seasonal conditions making desirable exhibitions in advance of general release as herein defined.

(c) The Exhibitor agrees to exhibit each of said motion pictures in the order of its general release by the Distributor in the exchange territory in which said theatre is located. The Exhibitor shall have the right to select any of the motion pictures, excepting the last deliverable hereunder, for exhibition out of the order of its general release, subject to prior runs and/or protection granted other exhibitors, on the date or dates determined as provided in Article Sixth hereof or otherwise agreed upon, but only upon the following conditions (a) that the Exhibitor is not in default hereunder and shall have fully complied with all the provisions, if any, set forth in the Schedule for the exhibition of one or more of said motion pictures at specified intervals; and (b) that the Distributor and the Exhibitor shall then agree upon the date or dates upon which all of the motion pictures generally released prior to the general release of such motion picture and available for exhibition hereunder shall be exhibited by the Exhibitor, which date or dates shall be within thirty (30) days from the first exhibition date of the motion picture to be exhibited out of the order of its general release; or in the alternative the Exhibitor shall then pay to the Distributor the license fee for each of such motion pictures then generally released and available for exhibition hereunder, and as to any thereof which shall not be exhibited by the Exhibitor within thirty days from the first exhibition date of the motion picture to be exhibited out of the order of its general release, the grant of the run and protection period in respect thereof shall be deemed waived by the Exhibitor. Upon the failure or refusal of the Exhibitor to exhibit any of such motion pictures then generally released and available for exhibition hereunder within said thirty day period or to pay the license fee thereof, the right of the Exhibitor to thereafter select for exhibition any motion picture out of the order of its general release shall be forfeited. The provisions of this paragraph (c) shall not be deemed to limit or qualify the provisions of Article Sixth hereof excepting as in this paragraph (c) specifically provided.

(d) The Distributor shall make deliveries hereunder to the Exhibitor or to the Exhibitor's authorized agent, by delivery at the Distributor's exchange, or to a common carrier, or to the United States Postal authorities. If deliveries are made to a carrier or to a post office, they shall be made in time for prints to reach the place where the said theatre is located in time for inspection and a projection thereof before the usual time for opening said theatre.

(e) Exhibitor agrees to return immediately after the last exhibition on the last date of exhibition licensed, each print received hereunder, with its reels and containers, to the exchange of the Distributor from which the Exhibitor is served or as otherwise directed by the Distributor in the same condition as when received, reasonable wear and tear due to proper use excepted. Exhibitor agrees to pay all costs of transportation of such prints, reels, and containers from the Distributor's exchange or the last previous exhibitor having possession of the same, and return to the Distributor's exchange; or if directed by the Distributor, to ship such positive prints elsewhere than to the Distributor's exchange transportation charges collect. It is agreed that the delivery of a positive print properly directed and packed in the container furnished by the Distributor therefor, to a carrier designated or used by the Distributor and proper receipt therefor obtained by the Exhibitor, shall constitute the return of such positive print by the Exhibitor.

(f) If the Exhibitor fails to or delays the return of any positive print to the Distributor or fails to forward or delays forwarding (as directed by the Distributor) any such print to any other exhibitor, the Exhibitor agrees to pay the Distributor the damage, if any, so caused the Distributor and in addition the damage, if any, so caused such other exhibitor. The Exhibitor shall have the right to participate in any compromise of or intervene in any arbitration or legal proceeding based upon any claim for such damage asserted against the distributor by another exhibitor; notice of which shall be given the Exhibitor by the Distributor.

Loss and Damage to Prints

FIFTH: The Exhibitor shall pay to the Distributor a sum equal to the cost of replacement at the Distributor's exchange for each linear foot of any print, lost, stolen, or destroyed or injured in any way in the interval between the delivery to and the return thereof by the Exhibitor in full settlement of all claims for such loss, theft, destruction or injury. Such payment, however, shall not transfer title to or any interest in any such positive print to the Exhibitor or any other party, nor release the Exhibitor from any liability arising out of any breach of this agreement. The Distributor shall at the option of the Exhibitor repay or credit to the Exhibitor any sums paid by the Exhibitor for any lost or stolen print, excepting "news reels," upon the return of such lost or stolen print to the Distributor within sixty (60) days after the date when the same should have been returned hereunder. The Exhibitor shall not be liable for the damage or destruction of any print, provided the Exhibitor establishes such damage or destruction occurred while in transit from the Exhibitor and delivery thereof was made as hereinabove provided. The Exhibitor shall immediately notify the Distributor's exchange by telegram of the loss, theft or destruction of or damage or injury to any print. If any print shall be received from the Exhibitor by the Distributor or any subsequent exhibitor in a damaged or partially destroyed condition it shall be deemed to have been so damaged or destroyed by the Exhibitor unless the latter, immediately after the first public exhibition thereof, shall have telegraphed the Distributor's exchange that such a print was received by the Exhibitor in a damaged or partially destroyed condition, and setting forth fully the nature of such damage and the amount of footage so damaged or destroyed.

Selection of Play Dates

SIXTH: Unless otherwise agreed upon or unless definitely specified or otherwise provided for in the Schedule, the exhibition date or dates of each of said motion pictures shall be determined as follows:

1. Subject to prior runs and/or protection granted or hereafter granted by the Distributor to other exhibitors and within a reasonable time after a print or prints of any of said motion pictures are received at the exchange of the Distributor out of which the exhibitor is served, and provided the Exhibitor is not in default hereunder, the Distributor shall mail to the Exhibitor a notice in writing of the date when each such motion picture will be available for exhibition by the Exhibitor (which date is hereinafter referred to as the "available date"). Such notice shall be mailed to the Exhibitor at least fifteen (15) days before the available date therein specified

2. Within fourteen (14) days after the mailing of such notice, the Exhibitor shall select an exhibition date or dates not theretofore assigned to another exhibitor or other exhibitors, within the period commencing upon the available date and ending thirty (30) days thereafter and give to the Distributor written notice of the date or dates so selected.

3. Upon the failure of the Exhibitor to so select such date or dates the Distributor shall designate such date or dates by mailing written notice thereof to the Exhibitor.

Protection and Run

SEVENTH: The Distributor agrees not to exhibit or grant a license to exhibit any of said motion pictures for exhibition in conflict with the "run" or prior to the expiration of the "protection period" if any in the Schedule specified at any theatre therein named or within the territorial limits therein specified. Such period of protection as to each of said motion pictures shall be computed from the last date of the exhibition thereof licensed hereunder. If protection is granted against a named theatre or theatres indicating that it is the intention of the Distributor to grant such protection against all theatres in the immediate vicinity of the Exhibitor's theatre then unless otherwise provided in the Schedule, such protection shall include any theatre in such vicinity thereafter erected or opened.

Description of Pictures

EIGHTH: (a) The Distributor shall have and hereby reserves the right in the sole discretion of the Distributor to change the title of any of the said motion pictures, to make changes in, alterations and adaptations of any story, book or play to substitute for any thereof any other story, book or play. The Distributor also shall have and hereby reserves the right to change the director, the cast or any member thereof of any of said motion pictures.

(b) The Exhibitor shall not be required to accept for any feature motion picture described in the Schedule as that of the following named star or stars any motion picture of any other star or stars:

nor to accept any other feature motion pictures in place of any thereof in the Schedule which are designated "no substitutes," provided that not more than twenty (20%) percent of the total number of feature motion pictures specified in the Schedule, other than the motion pictures of said star or stars, are so designated. The right of rejection conferred on the Exhibitor by this Clause is in addition to the right of exclusion provided in Clause Fifteenth hereof.

(c) The Distributor warrants that none of said motion pictures are reissues of old negatives, old negatives retitled or foreign produced by a foreign producer, excepting those specifically specified as such in the Schedule; and further that none of said motion pictures contains or will contain any advertising matter for which compensation is received by the Distributor, or any subsidiary or affiliate of the Distributor.

Advertising Prior to First Run

NINTH: (a) If the Exhibitor is granted a subsequent run of the said motion pictures the Exhibitor shall not advertise any thereof by any means of advertising prior to or during the exhibition of any one of said motion pictures by any other exhibitor having the right to a prior run thereof and charging admission prices higher than the prices charged for admission to the Exhibitor's theatre, excepting advertising inside the theatre not intended for removal therefrom by the public, unless the first date of exhibition hereunder of any such motion picture shall be within fifteen (15) days from the last exhibition date of such prior run exhibition, in which case the Exhibitor shall have the right to advertise such motion picture provided the Exhibitor does not in any advertising state that the prices charged for admission are or will be less than the admission prices charged by the Exhibitor having the first or prior run of such motion picture. Nothing in this Clause shall be deemed to prohibit the Exhibitor from advertising generally all of said motion pictures as a group but such general advertising shall not refer to any of said motion pictures during its exhibition by any other exhibitor having the first or immediately prior run thereof, excepting as herein provided.

(b) The Exhibitor shall not advertise by any means of advertising any of said motion pictures which may be roadshown by the Distributor and not excepted and excluded from this license, until after the completion of such roadshowing in the United States, and then only as permitted in paragraph (a) of this Clause.

(c) For a breach of the provisions of this Clause the Distributor shall have in addition to all other rights the right to exclude from this license any motion picture advertised in violation of the provisions hereof by written notice to such effect mailed to the Exhibitor and upon the mailing of such notice the license of such motion picture shall terminate and revert to the Distributor, unless arbitration is herein provided for and immediately upon the receipt of any such notice of exclusion the Exhibitor by Written notice given to the Distributor shall deny breaching any of the provisions of this Clause, in which case the question of fact raised by such denial shall be determined by arbitration.

Acceptance by Distributor

TENTH: Until accepted in writing by an officer of or any person authorized by the Distributor and notice of acceptance sent to the Exhibitor this instrument shall be deemed only an application for a license under Copyright, and may be withdrawn by the Exhibitor any time before such acceptance. Unless such notice of acceptance is sent the Exhibitor by mail or telegraph within fifteen (15) days after the date thereof, if the said theatre of the Exhibitor is located East of the Mississippi River, and within thirty (30) days after the date thereof if located west of the said river, said application shall be deemed to have been withdrawn. The deposit by the Distributor of any check or other consideration given by the Exhibitor at the time of application as payment for any purpose or the delivery of a print of any of said motion pictures shall not be deemed an acceptance hereof by the Distributor.

Changes in Writing

ELEVENTH: This license agreement is complete and all promises, representations, understandings and agreements in reference thereto have been expressed herein. No change or modification hereof shall be binding upon the Distributor unless in writing signed by an officer of the distributor, excepting in an emergency and only then, a change or modification may be consented to in writing but only by the representative of the Distributor managing the Distributor's exchange out of which the Exhibitor is served provided such change or modification does not change or modify the run, and/or protection period, or decrease any rental, or eliminate any motion picture specified in the Schedule.

Assignment on Sale or Theatre

TWELFTH: This license shall not be assigned by either party without the written consent of the other, provided, that if the Exhibitor sells the said theatre or transfers any interest therein and is not in default hereunder, the Exhibitor may assign this license to the purchaser of the theatre or of such interest without the written consent of the Distributor but any such assignment shall not be valid or of any effect hereunder unless a written acceptance thereof by the assignee assuming the obligations of the Exhibitor shall be delivered to the Distributor. Any such assignment shall not release the Exhibitor from any liability hereunder unless such release from liability is consented to by the Distributor in writing.

Taxes

THIRTEENTH: The Exhibitor shall pay to the Distributor upon demand, any tax, fee or other like charge now and/or hereafter imposed or based upon the delivery and/or the exhibition of prints of motion pictures and/or upon the sums payable under this license by the Exhibitor to the Distributor. If under any statute or ordinance any such tax, fee or other like charge is or shall be payable or paid by the Distributor and the exact amount payable hereunder by the Exhibition is not therein definitely fixed or cannot be exactly determined, then the Exhibitor shall pay such part of any such tax, fee or other like charge paid or payable by the Distributor as shall be fixed in the manner determined by the then President of the American Arbitration Association.

Prevention of Performance

FOURTEENTH: If the Exhibitor shall be prevented from exhibiting or the Distributor from delivering any of the said motion pictures for causes beyond their direct control then this license in respect to each such motion picture shall terminate and revert to the Distributor without liability on the part of either party, provided reasonable written notice of such termination and the cause thereof is given.

Option to Exclude if Group Licensed

FIFTEENTH: (a) If the total number of feature motion pictures offered to the Exhibitor by the Distributor, at one time, shall have been licensed by the Distributor hereunder, and the rental of each thereof averages less than Four hundred ($400.00) Dollars, the Exhibitor shall have the right to exclude from this license, first not to exceed five (5%) percent of the total number of feature motion pictures licensed hereunder; thereafter to further exclude not to exceed five (5%) percent of said total number; and/or lastly to further exclude not to exceed five (5%) percent of said total number, the aggregate number of feature pictures so excluded in no event to exceed fifteen (15%) percent of the total number licensed hereunder; provided that the Exhibitor is not in default hereunder and shall have fully complied with all of the provisions, if any set forth in the Schedule for the exhibition of one or more of said feature motion pictures at specified intervals; and provided further that the Exhibitor shall give to the Distributor written notice of the Exhibitor's election to exclude any of said feature motion pictures not later than fourteen (14) days before the date or dates fixed for its exhibition hereunder and at the same time: (1) as to each feature motion picture excluded in the first five percent of the total number so excluded to pay to the Distributor the rental therefor specified in the Schedule; (2) as to each feature motion picture included in the five percent of the total number thereafter so excluded to pay to the Distributor one-half of the rental thereof specified in the Schedule; and (3) as to each feature motion picture included in the five (5%) percent of the total lastly so excluded there shall be added to the rental of the motion pictures then remaining to be delivered hereunder an amount at least equal to the aggregate of the rentals of the motion pictures so lastly excluded, apportioned equally to each or to any one or more thereof, selected by the Exhibitor upon notice to such effect given to the Distributor, and the exhibition period specified in the Schedule of each of such motion pictures so selected may be, at the option of the Exhibitor upon written notice to such effect, ratably extended for such number of days as the rental thereof specified in the Schedule plus the amount added as herein provided, permits; provided that if there shall be no motion pictures then remaining to be delivered hereunder, the Exhibitor shall pay to the Distributor the rental therefor specified in the Schedule. In computing such number of days fractions of more than one-third shall be deemed one day.

For the purpose of determining whether or not the average rental of any of the motion pictures, the rental of which is to be computed in whole or in part upon a percentage of the receipts of the Exhibitor's theatre, is more or less than $400.00, the rental of each such motion picture shall be deemed to be the average amount of the license fees paid by the Exhibitor to the Distributor for each feature motion picture distributed by the Distributor and exhibited at said theatre during a period of one year prior to the term hereof and of which the rental was computed in whole or in part upon a percentage of the receipts of the Exhibitor's theatre.

(b) On or before the fifteenth (15th) day after the end of each three (3) months period of the term of this license, the Distributor shall repay to the Exhibitor a sum equal to the amount paid by the Exhibitor to the Distributor as rental of the feature motion pictures first excluded by the Exhibitor as provided in Paragraph (a) of this clause, during such three months period provided that during such three months period the Exhibitor shall have exhibited as herein provided, all of the feature motion pictures licensed hereunder then generally released and available for exhibition hereunder by the Exhibitor, excepting those, if any, excluded as provided in this clause and shall have paid to the Distributor at the time herein specified the rental of each thereof.

(c) For the purpose of computing the sum required to be paid by the Exhibitor to the Distributor as provided in Paragraph (a) of this Clause for any motion picture, the rental or any part of which is to be computed in whole or in part upon a percentage of the receipts of said theatre, shall be deemed to be that amount or part thereof which is equal to such percentage of the average daily gross receipts of such theatre on each date any feature motion picture distributed by the Distributor was exhibited thereat during the period of ninety (90) days prior to the date of the Exhibitor's written notice to exclude such feature motion picture, or if no feature motion picture distributed by the Distributor was exhibited at such theatre during said ninety (90) days period, then the rental or part thereof shall be deemed to be that amount or part thereof which is equal to such percentage of the average daily gross receipts of said theatre during the period of thirty (30) operating days immediately prior to the date of said written notice to exclude such feature motion picture.

(d) In computing said percentages of the total number of feature motion pictures fractions of less than one-half shall be disregarded.

(e) Upon the failure or refusal of the Exhibitor to fully and completely comply with each and every condition hereinabove in this Clause specified and upon which the Exhibitor is granted the right to exclude any of the feature motion pictures licensed hereunder, or provided the parties hereto have agreed to arbitration as provided in Clause Twentieth, or as provided in any other existing license agreement between said parties, and the Exhibitor shall fail or refuse to arbitrate any claim or controversy arising hereunder or thereunder, or to comply with any award in respect thereto, such right to exclude any feature motion picture and thereafter to exclude from this license additional feature motion pictures, shall thereupon forthwith terminate and shall not again be granted hereunder during the term hereof.

(f) Upon the exclusion of each of the feature motion pictures permitted by the provisions of this Clause the run and protection period, if any, granted the Exhibitor in respect thereto shall be deemed waived by the Exhibitor and the license thereof shall thereupon terminate and revert to the Distributor.

First Run Exhibitions

SIXTEENTH: (a) If the Exhibitor is granted a first run of the said motion pictures, the exhibitor shall exhibit each of the feature motion pictures excepting those described in Paragraph (d) of this Clause within the period beginning with the date scheduled and announced by the Distributor for the general release of each feature motion picture in the territory wherein is located the exchange of the distributor out of which the Exhibitor is served and ending one hundred and twenty (120) days thereafter, notwithstanding any provision of Clause Sixth hereof to the contrary. If the first exhibition date of any of the said motion pictures shall occur on a date later than ninety (90) days after its scheduled and announced general release date, then the period of protection of such motion picture shall be reduced so as to expire one hundred and twenty (120) days after said scheduled date of its general release. If the Exhibitor is granted a first run of the said motion pictures and the Exhibitor fails to exhibit any feature motion picture within said period of one hundred and twenty (120) days, the grant of the said first run and the protection period in respect thereof shall be deemed waived by the Exhibitor and the license fee as to such feature motion picture shall thereupon forthwith become due and payable to the Distributor, with the right to the Exhibitor to exhibit such feature motion picture as hereinafter in Paragraph (e) of this Clause provided.

Second Run Exhibitions

(b) If the Exhibitor is granted a second run of the said motion pictures and any other exhibitor having been granted the first run thereof immediately prior to such second run fails to exhibit any of the feature motion pictures, excepting those described in Paragraph (d) of this Clause within the said period of one hundred and twenty (120) days specified in Paragraph (a) of this Clause, the Exhibitor shall exhibit each such feature motion picture within the period beginning with the date of the expiration of the said one hundred and twenty (120) days period and ending fourteen (14) days thereafter, notwithstanding any provision of Clause Sixth hereof to the contrary. If the Exhibitor is granted a second run of the said motion pictures and the Exhibitor fails to exhibit any feature motion picture within said fourteen (14) days period the grant of such second run and the protection period if any in respect thereof shall be deemed waived by the Exhibitor and the license fee as to such feature motion picture shall thereupon forthwith become due and payable to the distributor with the right to the Exhibitor to exhibit such feature motion picture as hereinafter in Paragraph (e) of this Clause provided.

Subsequent Runs Exhibitions

(c) If the Exhibitor is granted a run subsequent to a second run of the said motion pictures and any other Exhibitor having been granted the second run thereof immediately prior to such subsequent run fails to exhibit any of the feature motion pictures, excepting those described in Paragraph (d) of this Clause within the said period of fourteen (14) days specified in Paragraph (b) of this Clause the Exhibitor shall exhibit each feature motion picture within the period beginning with the date of the expiration of the said fourteen day period and ending seven (7) days thereafter, notwithstanding any provision of Clause Sixth hereof to the contrary. If the Exhibitor is granted a run subsequent to a second run of the said motion picture and the Exhibitor fails to exhibit any feature motion picture within said seven (7) day period, the grant of such subsequent run and the protection period if any in respect thereof shall be deemed waived by the Exhibitor and the license fee as to such feature motion picture shall thereupon forthwith become due and payable to the Distributor with the right to the Exhibitor to exhibit such feature motion picture as hereinafter in Paragraph (e) of this Clause provided.

Extended Runs

(d) Any of the motion pictures which shall have been exhibited at any theatre in the said territory for more than one show week prior to the run granted the Exhibitor shall be excepted from the provisions of this Clause and of Paragraph (b) of Clause Fourth.

Exhibition After Revocation of Run and Protection

(e) Upon the waiver of the grant of the run and/or the protection period of any feature motion picture as provided in Paragraphs (a), (b) or (c) of this Clause, the Exhibitor upon payment of the sum or sums payable hereunder as provided in this Clause for the license to exhibit such feature motion picture, shall have the right to exhibit the same hereunder upon a date or dates not in conflict with any run and/or protection period granted or hereafter granted to other exhibitors, upon written request mailed or delivered to the Distributor within sixty (60) days after the last date upon which such feature motion picture should have been exhibited by the Exhibitor as provided in this Clause. Failing to make such request within said period of sixty (60) days the license to exhibit such feature motion picture granted hereunder shall terminate and revert to the Distributor.

If the provisions of this Clause shall in anywise be in conflict with the provisions of any other license agreement made and entered into by the Distributor with any other exhibitor prior to September 1, 1933, the provisions of this Clause shall be deemed to be subordinate and subject to the provisions of such other license agreement.

SEVENTEENTH: If any of the said motion pictures described in the Schedule, excepting those, if any, which may be roadshown by the Distributor, shall not be generally released by the Distributor for distribution in the United States during the period beginning and ending , each such motion picture shall be excluded from this license, upon written notice to such effect given to the Exhibitor by the Distributor prior to fifteen (15) days before the end of said period, unless the Exhibitor shall give written notice to the Distributor not later than thirty (30) days after the end of said period that the Exhibitor elects to exhibit hereunder all such motion pictures if generally released during the year immediately following the end of said period. If such notice of election is given as aforesaid the Distributor shall deliver and the Exhibitor shall exhibit each of such motion pictures upon the terms and conditions of this license excepting that any thereof which are not so generally released within the said following year shall also be excepted and excluded from this license. In such case the Distributor may exhibit and license for exhibition each of such motion pictures so excluded when and where desired by the Distributor and all claims of the Exhibitor in respect thereof are hereby expressly waived and the Distributor released and discharged therefrom by the Exhibitor.

EIGHTEENTH: If the Exhibitor shall fail or refuse to pay the rental of any of such motion pictures as provided in this license or to furnish statements of the receipts of said theatre, if any are required hereunder, or to give the Distributor's representative access to the said theatre or its box office and/or the Exhibitor's books and records relative to motion pictures the rentals of which are based upon the said theatre's admission receipts as herein provided, or if the Exhibitor shall exhibit or permit the exhibition of any of said motion pictures at any time or place other than as herein specified, or if the Exhibitor becomes insolvent or is adjudicated a bankrupt, or executes an assignment for the benefit of his creditors, or if a receiver is appointed for any of the property of the Exhibitor, or if the Exhibitor voluntarily or by operation of law should lose control of the said theatre or of his said interests therein making it impossible for the Exhibitor to exhibit the said motion pictures at the said theatre, then upon the happening of any one or more of said events, the Distributor may at its option, (1) terminate this license agreement, or (2) suspend the delivery of additional motion pictures hereunder until such default or defaults should cease and be remedied. It is agreed that the exercise of any of said remedies by the Distributor shall be in addition to and without prejudice to any right or remedy of the Distributor against the Exhibitor at law or in equity and/or otherwise provided for in this license agreement.

Cutting or Alteration of Prints

NINETEENTH: The Exhibitor shall exhibit each print in its entirety and shall not copy, duplicate, subrent or part with possession of any print. The Exhibitor shall not cut or alter any print, excepting to make necessary repairs thereto, or when required by any duly constituted public official or authority or with the written or telegraphic consent of the distributor. The Exhibitor however may cut the print of a news reel, and in such case shall completely restore all parts cut therefrom, prior to the return thereof to the Distributor or shipment elsewhere if so directed by the Distributor, in the same condition as received by the Exhibitor.

OPTIONAL CLAUSE: The following Clause Twentieth is optional with the parties hereto. If it is desired to make such clause a part of this license, the Exhibitor and the duly authorized representative of the Distributor shall sign their respective names where indicated immediately following this paragraph and unless so signed the said Clause shall be deemed excluded from this license agreement.

It is agreed by and between the parties that Clause Twentieth, providing for voluntary arbitration of disputes arising hereunder, shall be included as a part of this license.

Representative of the Distributor duly authorized to agree to the following Clause Twentieth.

Exhibitor.

Arbitration

TWENTIETH: The Exhibitor and the Distributor, respectively, freely and voluntarily agree that as a condition precedent to the commencement of any action or proceeding in any court by either of them, to determine, enforce or protect the legal rights of either hereunder, each shall submit all claims and controversies arising hereunder for determination by arbitration to an Arbitration Board (hereby expressly waiving the oath of the arbitrators) which shall consist of four members, each of whom shall be engaged in the motion picture business, and two of whom to be appointed by the Exhibitor, and the remaining two to be appointed by the Distributor.

Upon the written request of the Distributor or the Exhibitor for the arbitration of any dispute or controversy arising hereunder, the party making such request shall name herein two arbitrators stating the business address and business or business connection of each and shall designate therein the date, time and place of the hearing of such controversy. The date of such hearing shall not be earlier than seven (7) days from the date of the sending of such notice, unless it shall be claimed in such notice that irreparable injury will result unless there is a speedy determination of such controversy in which case such hearing may be designated to be held earlier than said seven (7) day period.

Within five (5) days after the mailing of such request for arbitration, the party upon whom such request is made shall name two arbitrators in a written notice mailed or delivered to the other party, stating therein the business address and business or business connection of each arbitrator. If either party fails or refuses to name the arbitrators as herein provided or if any arbitrator so named shall fail or refuse to act, or be unable to serve or shall be challenged and others are or another arbitrator qualified and then available to act is not then appointed, others or another arbitrator may be appointed by the other party as the case may be.

No member of the Arbitration Board shall hear or determine any controversy in which he has an interest direct or indirect and any member having such interest shall be disqualified to act.

If the arbitrators or a majority of them are unable to reach a decision, then they, or a majority of them, shall immediately select an umpire who shall not be engaged in the motion picture business. In such case the hearing before the umpire shall be at such time and place as the umpire shall designate and shall be had before the umpire alone, the arbitrators not to be permitted to attend the hearing before the umpire. If the arbitrators or a majority of them are unable to agree upon the selection of an umpire, the American Arbitration Association shall be requested to make such selection.

The Arbitration Board shall have general power to determine such dispute or controversy as shall be submitted, to make findings of fact in respect thereof and to direct specific performance of a contract, and/or that the same has been breached in whole or in part, and/or that damages on such account shall be paid. The Board of Arbitration shall have the power only to give force and effect to the provisions of this license agreement and the rights or obligations of the parties thereunder; provided that if after a full hearing of any controversy submitted for arbitration hereunder, excepting any submission to an umpire designated as hereinabove provided, the arbitrators or a majority of them are of the opinion that because of unusual circumstances arising after the execution of this license agreement and beyond the direct control of the parties hereto disclosed at such hearing, a strict enforcement of the provisions of this license agreement would impose undue hardship upon one of the parties, the arbitrators or a majority of them may recommend in writing to the parties a settlement of such controversy upon such terms and conditions deemed by the arbitrators fair and just. If such settlement is not agreed to by the parties within five (5) days after the receipt of a copy of such recommendation, the controversy shall be deemed withdrawn from the arbitrators and shall be submitted with a written statement of all of the facts adduced at the hearing before the arbitrators together with all documentary evidence, to the National Appeal Board in New York. The disposition by the National Appeal Board of any such recommendation shall be final and binding upon the parties hereto.

The hearing of any such controversy shall be had before the Arbitration Board in the city wherein is situated the exchange of the Distributor from which the Exhibitor is served, unless the parties agree in writing that such hearing be had in some other place. If either party fails or refuses to submit to arbitration any such claim or controversy, the other party may apply to a United States District Court, or to any other Court, including a court of a state in which such hearing would otherwise not be had, for an order to proceed to arbitrate in which case such hearing shall be had in such place as the court to which such application is made may lawfully direct.

The parties hereto further agree to abide by and forthwith comply with any decision or award of the arbitrators, or a majority of them and consent that any such decision or award shall be enforceable in or by any Court of competent jurisdiction pursuant to the laws of such jurisdiction now or hereafter in force.

If the Exhibitor shall fail or refuse to submit to arbitration any such claim or controversy or to abide by and comply with the award of the arbitrators in respect thereto, within seven (7) days, the Distributor may at its option suspend the deliveries of the motion pictures provided for in this and in each other existing license agreement between the parties hereto and/or terminate this and each such other license agreement: and upon such termination the aggregate of the license fees of all motion pictures specified in this and any other such license agreement then not exhibited forthwith shall become due and payable by the Exhibitor.

If the Distributor shall fail or refuse to submit to arbitration any such claim or controversy or to abide by and comply with the decision or the award of an Arbitration Board in respect thereto within seven (7) days, the exhibitor may at the option of the Exhibitor terminate this and any other existing license agreement between the parties hereto by mailing a notice to such effect to the Distributor within seven (7) days after such failure or refusal; and the Exhibitor shall have the rights and remedies provided in Clause Second (b) for failure to deliver motion pictures.

Any such termination by either party shall be without prejudice to any other right or remedy which the party so terminating may have by reason of any breach by the other party to this or any other existing agreement between the parties.

Each of the parties hereto, without notice to the other, may apply to any Court having jurisdiction to make this agreement to arbitrate a rule or order of such Court.

OPTIONAL CLAUSES

Advertising Accessories

The Exhibitor agrees to lease from the Distributor or the Distributor's authorized agent for use only in connection with the exhibition of each of the motion pictures exhibited hereunder and agrees not to sub-lease or sell the following advertising accessories:

Admission prices

The Exhibitor during the whole of the licensed exhibition period of each of the motion pictures exhibited hereunder agrees to and shall charge for admission to said theatre the following prices:

Evenings: Adults, orchestra—balcony—children.
Matinees: Adults, orchestra—balcony—children.

If during any such period less than said admission prices is charged, the Distributor in addition to all other rights hereunder shall have the right: (a) to immediately terminate the license of the motion picture then being exhibited, by written notice to such effect to the Exhibitor and upon the giving of such notice, the license of such motion picture shall forthwith terminate and revert to the Distributor; or (b) provided the Exhibitor is granted herein a period of "protection" to reduce such period by not to exceed one-half in respect to each of the motion pictures thereafter deliverable hereunder; or (c) provided no period of protection is specified in the Schedule to withhold for a period not to exceed sixty (60) days notice of the date when each motion picture thereafter deliverable hereunder will be available for exhibition by the Exhibitor; and as to each such motion picture the "run" thereof, if any, granted the Exhibitor, shall be deemed revoked and the Exhibitor agrees to exhibit each such motion picture after notice of the available date thereof upon the date or dates determined as provided in Clause Sixth hereof.

Midnight Shows

The license herein granted for the number of days specified in the Schedule shall not include the right of exhibition at any time during said exhibition period prior to six A. M. on the date or first date of exhibition herein provided for unless exhibition prior to six A. M. on said date or first exhibition date is expressly granted in writing.

Roadshows

(a) The Distributor shall have the right to exhibit and/or cause to be exhibited as a "roadshow," at any time prior to the exhibition thereof hereunder, such of the motion pictures licensed hereunder as the Distributor may from time to time select and determine, provided, however, that such roadshow exhibitions shall be at theatres at which admission prices for evening performances, during such exhibitions thereof, of not less than one dollar shall be charged for the majority of the orchestra seats, and further provided that, except in the cities of New York and Los Angeles, not more than two of such motion pictures shall be so roadshown.

(b) If and when any such roadshow exhibition shall be in the City of New York and/or the City of Los Angeles, and if the Exhibitor's theatre is situated in the territory then served by the Distributor's exchange or exchanges located in New York or in Los Angeles, as the case may be, the Distributor shall have the right to except and exclude from this license not to exceed two of such motion pictures so roadshown in each or both of said territories, upon sending to the Exhibitor written notice to such effect not later than four (4) weeks after the commencement of such roadshow exhibition and provided that the Distributor shall by like notice except and exclude such motion picture from all other license agreements containing this Clause and licensing the exhibition of such motion picture in such territory. The exception and exclusion of any such motion picture in the territory then served by the Distributor's exchange or exchanges located in the City of Los Angeles, or in the City of New York, as the case may be, shall not be deemed to require the Distributor to except and exclude the same motion picture in both of said territories.

(c) If and when any such roadshow exhibition, excepting those in the City of New York and/or in the City of Los Angeles, shall be in the territory served by the Distributor's exchange or exchanges serving the Exhibitor's theatre, the Distributor shall have the right to except and exclude from this license not to exceed two of such motion pictures so roadshown upon sending to the Exhibitor written notice to such effect within seven (7) days after the commencement of such roadshow exhibition and provided that the Distributor shall by like notice except and exclude each such motion picture from all other license agreements containing this Clause and licensing the exhibition of such motion picture in such territory.

(d) The inadvertent omission to send to any of such other exhibitors the notice provided for in Paragraphs (a) and (b) of this Clause shall not be deemed to affect the exception and exclusion from this license of any such motion picture.

(e) The Distributor may so exercise such right to except and exclude any such motion picture from time to time, in the respective territories, as above defined, in the United States. Any motion picture so roadshown in any place in the United States, and not excepted and excluded from this license as aforesaid, shall not be deemed available for exhibition hereunder until after the completion of such roadshowing of such motion picture in the United States, and such motion picture shall be exhibited hereunder when generally released by the Distributor and as and when available for exhibition by the Exhibitor, and the term of this license agreement specified in Clause Second shall be in respect to each such motion picture, extended to and including the date or dates of exhibition by the Exhibitor hereunder of each thereof.

(f) For each motion picture that the Distributor shall except and exclude, as aforesaid, the Exhibitor is hereby granted the option to except and exclude from this license (in addition to those which may be excluded as provided in Clauses Fifteenth and Seventeenth) one of the other motion pictures licensed hereunder, but only if the Exhibitor shall give to the Distributor written notice to such effect not later than fourteen days before the date fixed for the exhibition hereunder of such other motion picture. The Distributor may exhibit and/or license the exhibition of any and all motion pictures excepted and excluded from this license by the Distributor and/or the Exhibitor, as aforesaid, when and where desired by the Distributor, free from all claims of the Exhibitor in respect thereof and the license of each thereof shall forthwith upon exclusion as hereinbefore provided terminate and revert to the Distributor.

The following Clause may be, at the option of the Distributor, substituted for subdivision (b) of Clause Eighth:

(b) The parties hereto agreeing that the popularity of different types of motion pictures is subject to constant change and that the Distributor may find it necessary or advisable in certain cases to substitute different motion pictures for those designated or described in the Schedule, the Exhibitor agrees, provided any such substituted motion picture is equal in box office possibilities to the motion picture for which it is substituted, to accept such substituted motion picture in place of the motion picture originally designated or described, with the same force and effect as if the substituted motion picture had been originally designated and described in the Schedule. If the Exhibitor desires to question the relative box office possibilities of the original motion picture and the substituted motion picture, the Exhibitor may do so within five (5) days after the receipt of written notice of substitution which shall be sent by the Distributor to the Exhibitor prior to or concurrently with the mailing of the notice of availability thereof. At the time of mailing of such notice of substitution the Distributor shall have available for screening at the exchange of the Distributor from which Exhibitor is served, a print of the substituted motion picture. If the Exhibitor contends that the substituted motion picture is not equal in box office possibilities to the original motion picture, the Exhibitor shall, within said five day period, so notify the Distributor in writing and in such notice shall designate an appraiser stating his name and business address, failing which the Exhibitor shall be deemed to have accepted the substitution. Within three days after the receipt of such notice from the Exhibitor, the Distributor shall, by written notice to the appraiser designated by the Exhibitor and to the Exhibitor, designate an appraiser, stating his name and business address.

The appraisal to determine the relative box office possibilities of the said two motion pictures shall proceed within five (5) days after the designation of an appraiser by the Distributor and shall be held in the City in which is located the exchange of the Distributor from which the Exhibitor is served. The appraisers so designated, in determining the relative box office possibilities of said two motion pictures, may consider the suitability of the type of the substituted motion picture for the Exhibitor's theatre.

If the two appraisers are unable to agree upon the relative box office possibilities of the said two motion pictures, they shall appoint an umpire. If they cannot agree upon an umpire, an umpire shall be appointed by the President of the Chamber of Commerce or a person holding a similar position in such City; and the decision of the umpire upon such question shall be final and binding upon the parties hereto.

If within thirty (30) days after the receipt from the Distributor of a notice of substitution the Exhibitor shall elect, by written notice to the Distributor, to exhibit in place of the motion picture proposed to be substituted the original motion picture, if thereafter generally released by the Distributor, the Distributor shall deliver and the Exhibitor shall exhibit hereunder such original motion picture provided it is generally released by the Distributor within two (2) years from the date of said notice of substitution.

MISSISSIPPI—Not legalized. One town, Shaw, operates—they open on Sunday, pay the fine and continue to operate.

MISSOURI—Have Sunday Labor Laws which include motion pictures for Sunday showing. Law was never enforced and all towns operate except Marshall, Fairfax, Fulton.

MONTANA—No state statute prohibiting showing of motion pictures on Sunday and no law legalizing such showing, but all towns run shows on Sunday.

NEBRASKA—Legalized by local option. Sunday shows forbidden in Beatrice and Stromsberg. Town council opened Arnold for Sunday shows.

NEVADA—No state legislation against Sunday amusements.

NEW HAMPSHIRE—State passed Sunday Sports and Entertainment Bill in 1931 and individual cities and towns vote on it. The entire state is now open.

NEW JERSEY—Blue laws repealed in 1933. Towns which have local ordinance prohibiting Sunday shows: Belvedere, Blairstown, Frenchtown, Highbridge, Jamesburg, Metuchen, Montclair, Ocean Grove, Peapack, Princeton, Ridgewood, Upper Montclair, Westfield.

NEW MEXICO—Bill passed 1931 legislature legalizing Sunday showings and prohibiting local option measures from closing theatres.

NEW YORK—Home rule law by which towns or cities are legalized to show motion pictures on Sunday after 2 P.M., provided local ordinance is enacted to this effect by local legislative body and ratified by direct vote of people at special election. Under this law leading towns and cities show pictures on Sunday. The following towns have local ordinances prohibiting Sunday shows: Bronxville, Carmel, Middletown, New Paltz, Hancock, Cazenovia.

NORTH CAROLINA—Not legalized. State law, city ordinances and public opinion opposed to Sunday pictures. The following towns do have Sunday shows: Asheville, Benson, Chapel Hill, Dunn, Durham, Elizabeth City, Henderson, High Point, Louisburg, Plymouth, Raleigh, Robertsonville, Scotland Neck, Tarboro, Williamston. Sunday films legalized for Cherokee County. Numerous towns have Sunday shows with percentage of proceeds to charity.

NORTH DAKOTA — Sunday shows legalized by referendum in 1933.

OHIO—Legalized showing on Sunday. Forbidden in Bayesville and Cambridge.

OKLAHOMA—Legalized by local option. No state law against operation of Sunday shows. No towns of any consequence have closing laws.

OREGON—Legalized by local option to run shows on Sunday. No closed situation known.

PENNSYLVANIA—Sunday opening law passed, effective July 22, 1935. Legalized by local option.

RHODE ISLAND—Legalized.

SOUTH CAROLINA—Not legalized. Same statute as North Carolina.

SOUTH DAKOTA — Has state law prohibiting Sunday pictures. Local option has overruled this law, however, and pictures are shown on Sunday in all principal towns.

TENNESSEE—Governor signed bill repealing blue laws in April, 1935. Sunday opening by local option. However, not many operate. Memphis, Dresden, Savannah have Sunday shows.

TEXAS—Governor signed bill legalizing Sunday pictures, which law became effective August 12th, 1931, subject to local option. Prior to passage of law, majority of principal towns were open. Most towns now have Sunday shows.

UTAH—No law preventing showing of pictures on Sundays. Former state statute made it illegal to operate a theatre on Sunday, but this statute was repealed in 1925. Local option bill was subsequently introduced, but failed to pass.

VERMONT—Not legalized to show on Sundays.

VIRGINIA—Not legalized. Norfolk shows motion pictures on Sunday by virtue of test case where Court held motion pictures were works of necessity. In Richmond motion pictures were shown on Sunday by making contribution to city for charitable works. This has been discontinued. Roanoke operated for few Sundays but Court held it was in violation of Law. No place operating now but Norfolk. May 18, 1936, Court upheld Sunday opening in Richmond. Opinion taken as allowing all theatres to operate on Sunday. Sunday opening upheld by jury in Charlottesville, July 8, 1936.

WASHINGTON — Sunday opening not legalized except in Colfax where old statute providing Sunday closing was attempted to be enforced, but was defeated. Theatres throughout State operate without interference. Theatres in Pullman close on Sunday evenings as result of friendly arrangement with people of Normal School of Pullman. There are no Sunday closing ordinances.

WEST VIRGINIA—Not legalized, but all principal cities show pictures on Sunday which include Charleston, Bluefield, Huntington, Williamson (theatres in last city open after closing of church in morning and close prior to evening service) Forbidden by local ordinance in Lewisburg, Milton, and Ronceverte.

WISCONSIN—Blue laws repealed in 1933.

The Legion of Decency

The Legion of Decency was inaugurated and sponsored early in 1934 by a committee of Catholic Bishops of the United States, known as the Episcopal Committee on Motion Pictures. This committee was appointed at a general conference of the Catholic Hierarchy held in Washington, D. C., in November, 1933. The announced purpose of the Legion of Decency was to arouse public opinion against objectionable motion pictures and to urge the Catholic people to avoid patronizing any such pictures.

The members of the Episcopal Committee on Motion Pictures are:

Most Rev. John T. McNicholas, O.P., Archbishop of Cincinnati, Ohio (Chairman).
Most Rev. John J. Cantwell, Archbishop of Los Angeles, California.
Most Rev. John F. Noll, Bishop of Fort Wayne, Indiana.
Most Rev. Hugh C. Boyle, Bishop of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania.

Most Rev. Stephen J. Donaghue, Auxiliary to the Archbishop of New York.

Office—National Legion of Decency, 485 Madison Avenue, New York City. Rev. John J. McClafferty, Executive Secretary.

Managers Round Table

International MOTION PICTURE ALMANAC

Managers' Round Table

As in previous years, 1937 is distinguished by a steadily mounting total of memberships in Managers' Round Table, the theatreman's department appearing weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, the current listing still showing considerably over 5,000 showmen in all parts of the world actively participating in the Club programs. From every state, United States possessions and over 30 foreign countries come regular reports of advertising, publicity and exploitation created by theatremen with details covering all manner of activities including fronts, theatre and outside displays, contests, civic and merchant cooperations, school tieups, street ballyhoos, newspaper advertising, among others.

In addition to its function as a clearing house for profitable box office ideas, the Round Table continues to act as the manager's medium of expression as concerns his own welfare, articles and discussion of important phases of exhibition. Among the latter published during the past months were: "Overseas Publicity," "Illusion In Picture Display," "Cooperating With Summer Shows," "Homemade Radio Station," "Juvenile Unit Show," "Are Service Staffs Slipping?" "Pop Eye Club," "Football Contracts," "What Is Good Advertising?" "Loew Poli Division Motorcycle Cavalcade," "French Laurel and Hardy Club," "A Safe Hallowe'en," "How Politics Are Handled In Tri-State Theatre," "Children's Safety Club," "Doll Show," "M & P Circuit Moreau Week," "Licking the Pre-Christmas Slump," "The College Town Theatre," "Fire Drills," "Time Tables In the Theatre," "It Couldn't Be Done," "Patrons' Request Week," "Story Values Neglected In Ads," "Go-to-the-Show-On-Time," "Small Town Operation," "April Fool's Prevue" "Annual Rose Show," "Athletic Contest Tieins," "Patron Canvass," "The Pin-Poll Idea."

Guest Sections given over to the activities of individual theatre circuits and producer exploitations were continued in 1937 and among those represented were the theatremen of the RKO Radio foreign department. Seasonal and institutional ideas were also published, among these being best exploitation ideas contributed by members, Christmas and Easter issues made up of campaigns arranged for these periods by Round Tablers, a series on the RKO Midwest theatres Student Managers School, regular pages of representative theatre newspaper ads as well as regular pages of ads turned out by individual advertising managers of circuits and independent houses.

Continuing also were the "Wired from the Fields" reports, pages of members' photos and the series of Showmen's Travelogues. The former included wired reports on current exploitations from managers in key cities forwarded on opening nights for the information of theatremen playing immediate subsequent runs on these dates. The Travelogue series, composed of articles written by Herald correspondents on local theatre situations in their communities, in 1937, included Atlanta, St. Louis, Omaha, Wilmington, Oklahoma City, Houston, Des Moines, Cleveland, Indianapolis, Columbus and foreign key cities such as Tokyo, Berlin, Mexico City, London, Shanghai and Sydney. These all were run in addition to the regular departments of the Round Table including the Showman's Calendar of Important Dates, Cartoons, Personalities, New Members and Birthday Greetings.

No fees or dues are required in joining the Managers' Round Table Club. The manager desiring to become a member fills out the application blank printed on the New Member's page of the Round Table section and forwards it to Club headquarters. Upon acceptance, he is sent a framed Certificate of Membership and is expected from then on to make regular reports on his theatre activities, which are published for the benefit and information of others. For a small fee, Club pins are available and these are worn on the coat lapels of thousands of Round Tablers, in all parts of the globe.

Headquarters of the Managers' Round Table Club are the New York offices of Quigley Publications, 1270 Sixth Avenue, New York City. Among the services available to members, gratis, are hotel and theatre reservations, facilities for receiving and forwarding mail, and other Club accommodations.

A-Mike Vogel is chairman and Miss Gertrude Merriam is secretary.

The Quigley Awards

Interest in the Quigley Awards in 1937 remains high as theatremen in all parts of the world vie for the monthly Silver and Bronze Plaques awarded for best theatre campaigns. The fourth year of the Competitions was distinguished by the presentation in Hollywood of the 1936 Silver and Bronze Grand Awards to L. A. Chatham, manager, Sooner Theatre, Norman, Okla., and Sid Holland, City Manager, Elkhart Amusement Co., Elkhart, Ind., by Cecil B. De Mille.

Mr. Chatham was voted his honors for his entry on Warner Bros. "Anthony Adverse" and Mr. Holland on Columbia's "Music Goes Round" at the Elco Theatre, in Elkhart.

The 1936 Grand Awards Judging Committee composed of 25 leading industry judges convened at the Hotel Astor in New York City on April 6 and elected the winners by majority vote from among the 24 entries awarded the monthly plaques in 1936.

The Quigley Awards, sponsored by Motion Picture Herald through Managers' Round Table, are voted monthly for the theatre campaigns selected by the judges from all those submitted by theatremen each month.

The Quigley Grand Awards are given annually for the campaigns selected by the judges as possessing the highest merit from among the monthly plaque winners.

Two plaques, silver and bronze, are given monthly and inscribed sheepskin certificates as First and Honorable Mentions. Theatremen everywhere are eligible to compete and at liberty to enter single picture campaigns each month on domestic or foreign product.

Monthly winners are chosen by majority vote of committees of three judges, and different executives are selected each month from the following alphabetically arranged master list of judges, all of whom accepted appointments to serve in 1936. The Grand Awards winners are chosen by a committee selected from this group.

How the air express blankets the key cities of the United States is shown in the map, prepared by Railway Express Agency, Inc. Direct air express for film is provided by the Agency to 216 cities over 28,000 miles of air lines, overnight delivery from coast to coast and border to border, same-day delivery up to 750 or 1,000 miles, and coordinated service (part air and part rail) over 230,000 miles of railroads. The service is fed through 23,000 Railway Express offices and is handled by 57,000 employees and 10,000 motor vehicles.

YEAR IN ENGLAND

by BRUCE ALLAN

The twelve months past were in many ways the most eventful in themselves, and the most momentous for the future, of any period in the history of the British industry.

The year opened with a production boom. It closed with a production crisis. In its course it witnessed a remarkable box-office revival, traceable to a general improvement in community conditions, to an unusually "bad" summer, and to the continued good effects of the freeing of the low-priced seats from Entertainment Tax. The receipts both of exhibitors and of distributors undoubtedly reached a new high, and by a big margin. Theatre erection proceeded at such a pace that Redundancy,—now officially re-christened by the more intelligible name of Overbuilding,—became, and remains, a major industry problem.

Plenty of other problems remain for 1937-38. Aside from the question of British production, most of them are rooted in the seller-buyer relation of distributor and exhibitor. That the relations of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association and the Kinematograph Renters Society are no more cordial than they were in a period of slump underlines the fact that the British exhibitor considers himself seriously injured by trading conditions as they are established. This would not, in ordinary circumstances, perhaps, call for special comment. At this moment the fact that exhibitors are obsessed by the problem of rentals (which range up to 50 per cent of gross) and by allied factors of the trading position, may have a very important bearing on matters with which exhibitors, directly, appear to have no concern. For instance, it may have a very big effect in determining the exact form in which the Government re-enacts the Cinematograph Films Act, due to expire in 1938.

The future of the Films Act has been one of the two front-page stories of the year. The other has been the future of the Gaumont-British Corporation. To neither has the last chapter been written, at this time. When finality is reached the structure of the British industry, and its future for many years, will be profoundly affected, and a somewhat detailed consideration of both developments is therefore inevitable.

The "Moyne Committee"

A Departmental Committee on Cinematograph Films was appointed by the Right Hon. Walter Runciman, president of the Board of Trade, on March 25th, 1936. Its terms of reference were "to consider the position of British films, having in mind the approaching expiry of the Cinematograph Films Act, 1927, and to advise whether any, and if so what, measures are still required in the public interest to promote the production, renting and exhibition of such films." It became known as the Moyne Committee immediately, from the name of its chairman, Lord Moyne, DSO. The other members were Mr. Alan Charles Cameron, MC, Mr. Joseph Stanley Holmes, MP, Mr. James Joseph Mallon, the Hon. Eleanor Mary Plumer and Lieut.-Colonel Sir Arnold Wilson, KCIE, CSI, CMG, DSO, MP. Mr. Cameron, through his association with the British Film Institute, and Sir Arnold Wilson, a member of the Advisory Committee under the Films Act, were the only members publicly associated with an interest in film matters.

The Committee held its first meeting on May 5, 1936, hearing evidence on that occasion from the Board of Trade, and in subsequent meetings it received formal statements from, and examined representatives of, the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, the Kinematograph Renters Society, the Film Group of the Federation of British Industries, and from a great number of specialist associations, trade unions and individuals interested in the film from commercial, educational and other aspects. It issued two Bluebooks containing all these statements and a verbatim report of the evidence, and its final Report was presented to the Board of Trade in November.

The "Moyne Plan"

The recommendations of the Committee, on which controversy has ranged ever since, were, translated into non-legal terms, as follows:

1.—The Government should take steps to prevent transfers of controlling interests in British organizations to foreign concerns.

2.—The Government should encourage the formation of financial organizations to finance approved British production units.

3.—The principle of the Quota of British films should continue, as respects both exhibitors and distributors, for a further ten years.

4.—Separate Quotas should be established for features and shorts, British films in each class to be set against imports of the same class. (Under the present Act British feature footage may be used as "cover" for imported shorts).

5.—The opening Quota, for features, in a new Act, to be 20 per cent on distributors and 15 per cent on exhibitors.

6.—The principle of a Variable Quota to be adopted, each year's Quota to be fixed by regard to the actual output of good quality British films in the preceding twelve months. The ultimate aim to be a 50 per cent Quota.

7.—The opening Quota for shorts to be 15 per cent on distributors, 10 per cent on exhibitors.

8.—Variability to apply to shorts Quota on the same basis as in the case of features.

9.—A Quality Test, "based directly on viewing of the films," to be applied to all subjects, features or shorts, for which British registration is sought.

10 & 11.—Films not registered, or refused for registration, for distributors' Quota to be available for exhibitors' Quota.

12.—All films to be trade shown before bookings are accepted on them.

13.—Exhibitors' Quota to be computed quarterly, distributors' six-monthly. A default not exceeding 20 per cent in any period to be made good in the next.

14.—A distributor's license to be liable to cancellation on one conviction for Quota default instead of three convictions, as at present.

15.—Provision for exhibition of one copy of a foreign film for twelve weeks, without needing Quota cover. (Meets the case of foreign language films and specialized subjects, unsuitable for general release, but of artistic value.)

16.—Films made in British Dominions to be subject to the Quality Test.

17.—Dominions to be asked, in Quota legislation, to extend to British films the same treatment as is given to Dominion films in England.

18.—Ten per cent of the total length of any British film, or twenty per cent of studio scenes (whichever is the lesser) may be foreign footage without affecting its registration.

19.—Abolition of the stipulation that the scenario writer of a British film must be British.

20.—Newsreels and commercial films excluded from all recommendations as to new legislation.

21.—Distributors to be required to make a statutory declaration in regard to all their films that they have not been blind-booked in contravention of the booking restrictions clauses of the Act.

22.—Penalties for blind-booking offenses to lie against distributors only and to be increased to £250 for each offense; license to be liable to cancellation on a second conviction.

23.—Restrictions on advance booking to be withdrawn.

24.—Block booking to be made a legal offense and an annual statutory declaration to be made by each distributor that he has not forced exhibitors to take unwanted films.

25.—Three "try-outs" to be allowed, with certain safeguards, before the registration of a film.

26.—An annual census of British production to be taken by the Government.

27.—Sub-standard films to be excluded from immediate legislation, but the danger of foreign competition in this field to be watched.

28.—A Films Commission to be set up, for the purpose of administering a new Act and exercising the other recommended executive powers in regard to finance, foreign control, and so forth. To be composed of a chairman and not less than two or more than four other members, entirely independent of the film industry.

Reaction to Proposals

The Report undoubtedly came as a surprise to all sections of the trade. Even producers had not expected anything so drastic as a Quota potentially rising to 50 per cent, and the severe increase in the penalties on distributors and the general suggestion that the provisions of the present Act, as they affect that section of the trade, should be stiffened instead of being relaxed, were commented on adversely even by interests not subject to them. There was an almost universal feeling, at first, that the recommendations were unworkable, and a reaction against the idea of Government interference in the industry which led to discussions, abortive at the time, for the establishment of a ruling body of the trade itself under the presidency of a "British Will Hays."

As the three sections of the industry got down to individual discussions of the Report from the standpoints of their separate and selfish interests, it became clear that agreement on one hundred per cent opposition by the trade to the Moyne recommendations would not be established. Eventually, each of the three associations submitted statements in criticism of the Report to the Board of Trade, which established the following facts:

There was universal opposition to a Films Commission as envisaged in the Report. Producers accepted the idea of a Government body, but wished it to include trade members, to be restrained from interfering with companies' individual affairs and to be guided by a trade Advisory Committee.

Exhibitors asked an official Arbitration Board to consider disputes referred to it by the trade.

Distributors condemned the Commission without reservation.

The CEA and the Film Group accepted Quota differentiation in favor of the exhibitor, the Variable Quota, and the new measures against blind-booking, but producers supported distributors in opposition to the illegalization of block-booking.

The only real point of unanimity was in desiring the retention of the present restriction of advance booking to six months.

Things remained in this position until the annual Banquet of the CEA early in 1937, at which speeches were made by Lord Moyne and by Dr. Leslie Burgin, Parliamentary Secretary to the Board of Trade. Dr. Burgin scared the industry by an intimation that if the three sections could not agree, the Government would legislate as it thought the situation demanded. Very explicitly he said, "Gentlemen, organize yourselves, or be organized from without."

Interpreting this suggestion, with some reason, as an order, the CEA and the KRS re-established contact and, announcing preliminary agreement in regard to overbuilding, the Standard Contract and "various contract conditions," invited the Film Group to participate in further discussions of the Quota. At this later meeting the CEA representatives more or less played the part of spectators while producers and distributors discussed the possibility of arriving at a scheme of reciprocity between England and America which would make the present Quota unnecessary. These discussions were still continuing at this writing.

The situation is, that distributors, at whom all the most drastic suggestions in the Moyne Report are aimed, see their most hopeful policy to be an alliance with exhibitors. The exhibitors, who object more to the detail than to the principle of the Report, are conscious of the strength of their position and are quite openly demanding certain concessions which they regard as overdue, in general trading matters, as the price of their support of the KRS. In particular they desire arbitration by an official body as a prime measure of protection against what they assert are oppressive trading methods by distributors. They are believed to have obtained the consent of the KRS to this suggestion, together with a promise of relief from severe credit terms and a revival of the Standard Contract in a form acceptable to theatre men.

The scheme of reciprocity understood to have been put forward by the Film Group amounts to a substitution of the existing Quota by a provision that distributors of American films in England shall acquire British films for release in America or provide a "cash equivalent" to the producers. To this suggestion distributors are opposed in principle, describing it as a system of "forced exports." Their counter suggestion is that the distributor be free to produce or acquire five or six good quality British pictures in the year, with safeguards as to cost and quality, in place of acquiring fifteen to eighteen pictures, as at present, in order to meet the existing 20 per cent footage Quota. The big obstacle to acceptance of this proposal by production interests is that a vested interest exists in studios, which obviously will be active in proportion to the "compulsory" footage decreed by law. It is the "footage" interest as opposed to the entertainment interest represented by exhibitors and distributors.

Whether a compromise is arrived at between the three divergent interests represented in the current discussions is a matter of vital importance to the industry. It may be assumed that the presentation of an agreed trade policy to the Board of Trade will indicate very substantial concessions, from the CEA and the Film Group, to the KRS, the trade section most severely hit by the Moyne recommendations in their official form. In the absence of agreement, it must be feared that the Government, if it does not for the present take a course of safety by renewing the existing Act—and there are reasons to think that a not impossible procedure—will incline to the nationalistic policy championed by the Film Group.

Effect on Americans

In that event the situation may be set up that certain American interests may not find it possible to continue business in England on their present basis. There may be a reduction of American imports which, to the exhibitor, will mean the creation of still further difficulties in regard to product and price.

Such a situation would underline a fact basic to all British trade problems but scarcely glanced at in all the lengthy discussions of the Moyne Report. That fact is the absolute dependence of British cinemas on American films and American star values for their continuance as profit-making institutions. That British production itself has been established by the support of a box office created and maintained by American values is a sequential fact still less frequently mentioned. Penal legislation against the distributors of American films seems of doubtful wisdom as a political expedient. As a business measure it appears suicidal. The main hope for the outcome of the present talks must be that they will make this fact plain to the Government.

The Gaumont-British Deals

What the British trade knows as the Gaumont-British deals, but which more accurately would be described in the plural, came into the news in the first instance in May, 1936, as a rumor that Twentieth Century-Fox was buying control from the Ostrer brothers. By July, talk of offers of £1,500,000 ($7,500,000) for control from Mr. Joseph Schenck were in the wind. Mr. A. C. Blumenthal came to London in connection with mysterious negotiations, and in due course, after Ostrer visits to the States, agreement between the three brothers and Twentieth-Century-Fox, in combination with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, was announced. Statements that British control would be legally conserved did not obscure the fact that the Ostrer-Fox-Metro deal meant, in fact, substantial control of the G-B organization, comprising production, distribution and exhibition through the largest theatre circuit in the country, passing to American interests.

Questions were asked in the House of Commons. The press ran scare stories. Behind the scenes, in official and unofficial quarters, even more effective work was done. The result was an announcement, in October, that Mr. John Maxwell, chief of G-B's leading competitor, Associated British Pictures, had made a deal in two parts with the Ostrer brothers whereby he acquired their shares in the Metropolis and Bradford Trust, which controls a majority of voting shares in G-B. Immediately, Mr. Maxwell obtained the B or non-voting shares in Metropolis for a payment, in cash and shares, estimated to amount to over £600,000. The transfer of the "A" or voting shares was declared to be scheduled for a later date. Simultaneously the Ostrers issued a statement that control of G-B had not passed and Mr. Sidney Kent, for Twentieth Century-Fox, at that time in London, said that that company was not a party to the deal and that it reserved its legal rights. These rights were publicly known to include the power of veto on the sale of the Ostrer "A" shares in Metropolis unless half of the Fox holdings were sold. An offer by Mr. Maxwell for the holding in question was understood to have been made and rejected.

Deadlock

The position created was one of deadlock, only to be ended, it seemed, by Twentieth Century-Fox coming to terms with Mr. Maxwell and so allowing him to complete the "second part" of his Ostrer purchase. The situation changed somewhat on November 2, when Gaumont-British, which had passed its ordinary dividend owing to financial difficulties officially ascribed to its indifferent success in the American market, failed to obtain acceptance of its report and accounts by an angry annual meeting, which finally adjourned, by a vote hostile to the directors, for production of a consolidated statement of assets and liabilities. This document was produced at another meeting a month later. After another stormy meeting, the report and accounts were accepted.

Very vocal at this meeting was Mr. C. L. Nordon, lawyer spokesman of a group of dissentient ordinary shareholders, who demanded an investigating committee, threatened an extraordianry general meeting, and in general made it plain that a considerable section of G-B shareholders were anxious to replace the Ostrer directorate by another headed by Mr. John Maxwell, a director since the deal with the Ostrers but, as he himself explained on various occasions, without control of G-B policies.

The next development was a statement by Mr. Isidore Ostrer, after a mysterious and certainly abortive trip to U. S. for further talks with Messrs. Kent and Schenck, that distribution of British films in America was a losing proposition, that G-B was considering going out of major production and becoming in effect simply a theatre-owning organization, and that the future of British production depended upon compulsion being applied to American importers to spend a percentage of their British takings on the acquisition of British films for American distribution—a variation of the reciprocity scheme propounded to the Moyne Committee by Mr. Simon Rowson, and a foreshadowing of the policy to be adopted officially by organized British producers.

Followed rumors that G-B would be compelled to pass its preference dividend, a contingency foreseen for some time by insiders, who had good reason for believing that Mr. Maxwell, from his knowledge of G-B finances, had regarded this default as inevitable and had depended on it to give him the control of the company, irrespective of what the Ostrers or Fox-Metro might wish. Nonpayment of the preference dividend would have conferred votes on the holders in six months. The preference vote, it was common knowledge, would be used to put the Ostrers out and Mr. Maxwell in.

The next announcement was that the preference dividend would be paid on the due date, March 31, 1937. Promptly an open division of the G-B board was advertised. Against the Ostrers and their nominees were ranged Mr. Maxwell and the nominees of Twentieth Century-Fox in a protest against the dividend, the legality of which they, in the first instance, questioned. It was made public that the voting on the payment of the dividend was 5 to 4.

The "G F D Deal"

At about that time the "GFD Deal" began to occupy newspaper space. General Film Distributors, Ltd., founded by Mr. C. M. Woolf, a year previously joint managing director and deputy chairman of G-B, and backed by Lord Portal and Mr. J. A. Rank, both reputed sterling millionaires, had attracted attention previously by its purchase into Universal. It now figured as making an offer for the entire distribution of the G-B product. There were more G-B board meetings, the last of which witnessed agreement between the Ostrer and Woolf interests, against the continued opposition of the Maxwell and American sections of the board. Its effect was that G-B immediately closed down its Shepherd's Bush studio, the entire selling and distributing organization of G-B Distributors, Ltd., and went out of production except as regards eight pictures for which it was contracted and these it planned to make on a fifty-fifty cash basis with GFD, for distribution by GFD.

Opposition to the deal in the board, on a charge of needless scrapping of assets, was unsuccessful and opposition in the courts was also a failure, the "Nordon" committee being refused an injunction which it sought against the payment of the preference dividend on the grounds that it was being paid out of capital. Future action in the courts by the Nordon group is not ruled out, but the present position is that, through payment of the preference dividend, the Ostrers retain their control of the company. Meanwhile Mr. Maxwell has taken action against them, on the grounds that the sale to him of the Metropolis shares was obtained by misrepresentation; he is asking damages. It is unlikely that the case will be heard until in the fall.

In the meantime trade speculation mainly turns on the exact attitude of Twentieth Century-Fox-Metro (MGM now holders of half of the Fox shares in G-B) in the Ostrer-Maxwell fight for control. American nominees on the board have supported Mr. Maxwell throughout, yet the Fox holding in Metropolis was the original obstacle to Maxwell control of G-B. The probability appears to be that the American companies, which this year received no dividend on their near $20,000,000 investment in G-B, are anxious to see Mr. Maxwell in control, but on terms which guarantee their own specific interests, which are concerned with play dates as well as with cash.

Effect on General Situation

The G-B developments have had an important influence on the general trade situation. Mr. Isidore Ostrer's declaration that distribution in America was an uneconomic proposition for British producers was widely publicized. The subsequent abandonment of production by G-B was very generally ascribed to the money lost by the company in America, although the financial condition of the company could be ascribed to plenty of other conditions, and although Mr. Maxwell declared the abandonment of production and distribution to be unnecessary and wasteful.

The G-B move unfortunately coincided with a general production crisis, due to the fact that a great number of ill-founded and worse managed production units had exhausted the patience of their backers. The camouflage of the "disappointing American market" was freely used, implicitly or explicitly, by a big percentage of these failures, which in fact, as expressed in film circles, were due mainly to the plainest incompetence. It continues to be used as an explanation of the fact that British studio space, which was at a premium a year ago, is today going begging.

There are good reasons for thinking that British production is fundamentally in a healthier position today than it was twelve months ago. Undoubtedly, British producers have had, and spent, far too much for two or three years. The drying up of the easy money does not mean that backing will not be forthcoming for sound enterprises based on the second best market in the world, in which native product even now is secured twenty per cent of screen time.

Studio facilities are plentiful and efficient. The magnificent Pinewood plant, opened in October, is shortly to be supplemented by the eight-stage Amalgamated building at Elstree, while extensions of the Rock and Sound City plants are other developments of the year. What is needed is organization on business-like lines, based on market expectations in which American receipts figure sanely, instead of on the exceptional scale of that famous "freak," "The Private Life of Henry VIII."

Promises of 1938

Simply because the inefficients are rapidly weeding themselves out, at a painful cost to investors, it is possible to envisage a new start for production in 1938. It is even possible to believe that a majority of British producers, by that time, will have been converted to the belief that, since studio time is an expensive commodity, the most vital work in production must be done before the floor is reached. It is incredible but true that a great percentage of the mushroom concerns now shriveling paid such small regard to scrips that it was the rule rather than the exception to rewrite the story while the camera waited.

In the vaults are many interesting specimens of production at its worst which never were completed simply because the patience and the cash of the backers ran out before the producer could think of a happier ending. Of the footage, and the hundreds of thousands of pounds, wasted because exteriors failed to match interiors, or because a location unit returned without the scene for which it went on location, the stories are legion and some of them are painfully true.

With the cutting out of the deadwood this will cease. British production, for the most part, may be on a more modest scale for a number of years, but there is a real hope that it will be governed by business common-sense. If that is achieved the big pictures, and a small share at least of the American market, will come in due course. It is an important factor of the situation that at least two American concerns, New World (Twentieth Century-Fox) at Denham, and Metro-British-Studios, at a studio not yet officially identified, will be making in England pictures definitely budgeted and produced for the American market.

The Dixey Scheme

First talked of as a theory at the Summer Conference of the CEA at Eastborne in July, 1936, cooperative production and distribution by exhibitors, on lines akin to those of the original First National, has now been organized as a formal business plan, known officially as the British Independent Exhibitors (Distribution) Co., Ltd., and informally as "the Dixey Scheme," after its promoter, Captain A. C. N. Dixey. At the time of writing, the company was on the point of taking delivery of its first film and of commencing distribution. It has contracts with various independents, including Joe Rock, Ludovico Toeplitz and Gabriel Pascal, which are expected to produce six pictures in the first year.

Television

It is a British belief that television is farther advanced in this country than anywhere else in the world, and there is this behind the boast that British Broadcasting Corporation started a daily public service in the Fall of 1936 and has continued it ever since, with the promise of an extra daily hour.

The transmissions come from the Alexandra Palace in North London and are received over a 25-mile area. Plans for provincial stations, linked by cable to London, are in existence. The picture obtainable is roughly one foot wide, but various claims for "cinema screen" television have been made and, in part, substantiated. Baird Television (associated with Gaumont-British) introduced the television as a regular program item at the Dominion, London, on January 4th, 1937, showing a picture approximately 8 ft. by 6 ft., but transmitting by cable from a theatre dressing room.

In February, 1937 the BBC, which up to that time had used the Baird and EMI (Marconi) alternately for its transmissions, switched over to EMI exclusively, the system owing its victory to the virtues of its Emitron camera for direct transmission. Baird employed an intermediate film.

Organization:

There were two interesting additions to the already large numbers of societies, associations and organizations connected with, or desiring to influence the industry.

Early in March, one hundred representatives of 150 companies concerned with production, in one or other of its branches, met at the offices of the Federation of British Industries and agreed to form the Film Producers Association with five Sections: Producers, Studio Owners, Shorts Producers, Newsreel Producers, Laboratories. It was foreshadowed that the Film Group of the FBI, at present the representative body of producers, would become the Producers' Panel of the new body and that Mr. M. Neville Kearney, secretary of the Group, would become secretary of the new organization.

The other new body was the British Films Advancement Council, a propagandistic unit.

Import Duties

Unexposed Film: 1/3d per foot (one-third of a penny).

Exposed Negative: 5d per foot.

Printed Positive: 1d (one penny) per foot.

(Negative taken abroad by a British company is subject only to a duty of 1/3d per foot, but a certificate of approval from H. M. Customs must be obtained before the location party leaves, or alternatively a Board of Trade Certificate that the film is British within the meaning of the Films Act.)

Educational films, certified as such by the Board of Education, are admitted Duty Free.

Films may be viewed in Bond, without payment of Duty, at the Bonded Film Stores.

Entertainment Tax

(No alteration in this tax was made in the 1937 Budget.)

Admission Scale	Tax
Up to 6d	None
6d to 7½d	1½d
7½ to 10d	2 d
10d to 1/0½d	2½d
1/0½d to 1/3d	3 d
Over 1/3d	1½d for the first 1/3d and 1d for every 5d or part of 5d over 1/3d

The British penny (1d) is approximately 2 cents, and the half-penny (½d) therefore one cent.

INDISPENSABLE TO EVERY

Since 1907

For thirty years "Kinematograph Weekly" has been the leading Journal of the British Film Trade.

Indispensable alike to Exhibitor and Technician, every issue contains a considered and accurate summary of all the important trade activities of the week.

If you want reliable information regarding future developments; independent and unbiased news from the studios; details of new films long before the trade shows, then you must read

KINEMATOGRAPH WEEKLY

IDEAL KINEMA

Is the monthly supplement to "Kinematograph Weekly" and is a complete guide to the latest activities in Kinema design, decoration and equipment.

AMERICAN FILM EXECUTIVE

THE "RED GUIDE"

"KINEMATOGRAPH YEAR BOOK" — the famous "Red Guide" to the Kinema Industry—should be on the desk of every executive in the business.

In its 500 or more pages is presented the salient facts and figures about the British Trade—exhaustive information from every angle.

The Foreign Market

The quickened motion picture consciousness of other countries, both as an economic and a propagandistic medium, is evidenced in a resume of the news and statistical developments of the past year.

A twofold objective has been gaining momentum in foreign seats of government, and the two aims are closely allied in steps taken to carry them to fruition. One purpose is to lend every assistance possible to the building of a domestic industry of the motion picture, for the revenue to be obtained if successful. The other goal is a self-sustaining vehicle for national propaganda.

Governmental action to accomplish these ends follows two general courses. One is to restrict importations of product, and in practically every instance that means specifically American studios' product. The other is to enter into direct competition with Hollywood by making pictures that will be acceptable as entertainment by the American public.

Restrictive measures are largely in the form of Quotas or Kontingents, requiring that American companies purchase a number of the nation's own pictures in proportion to the total of American films admitted. Other forms of this are requirements of a guaranteed American market, or cash equivalent, for a stated number of pictures made in the other country, and demands that Americans produce a certain amount of product in the foreign land. There is also the device of limitation of the amount of money that may be exported from the country, thus forcing the distributor either to expend the money there or hold it idle in a foreign bank.

In the following pages the foreign situation is presented in epitome, in alphabetical sequence of countries for ready reference. The compilations were made by Nathan D. Golden, Chief of the Motion Picture Section of the Electrical Division of the Department of Foreign and Domestic Commerce at Washington, from reports to the section by attaches in the foreign fields.

ALBANIA

Although there exists no censorship law in Albania, films are censored by a commission consisting of representatives of the Ministry of Education, the police, the Court, the Press Bureau and the Prefecture. Films are censored from moral and political points of view.

The United States and Germany have almost equal shares in the market; France and Italy together account for only about 10 per cent. The Albanian public shows a considerable liking for German films because they are generally musical comedies, while American films are mostly melodramas. German films have always been less expensive than American films and American films are progressively increasing in price.

Taxes include:

(1) Customs Duties: Films imported into Albania and which are to be re-exported within 45 days pay a customs duty of 20 gold francs for 100 kilograms.

(2) Municipal Taxes: (a) Annual tax of 300 to 500 gold francs, according to importance, (b) amusement tax of 6 gold francs daily.

(3) Ministry of Finance Income Tax (not fixed).

(4) Miscellaneous stamp taxes.

There are 14 theatres, all wired for sound.

AUSTRIA

The system of issuing "Vormerkscheine" to pay for presentation permits issued by the provincial authorities did not change in Austria with regard to sound feature films ("Stammfilme") or sound shorts during 1936. Film imports and exhibition permits thus remained subject to Vormerkscheine (contingent) control. To stimulate domestic production, local suppliers of sound film recording apparatus receive as a bonus ten Vormerkscheine for every Austrian feature sound film (up to ten) of a specified standard and produced under various detailed conditions. If domestic film apparatus is used in the production of sound features, three additional Vormerkscheine are issued. Vormerkscheine are allotted for a limited number of shorts. One producer only (Selenophon) makes shorts in Austria and at present for 40 per cent of the shorts released receives from one to three Vormerkscheine depending on length and type.

Domestic sound films of all kinds are granted presentation permits without submitting Vormerkscheine. For foreign films, except news reels, and cultural shorts recognized by the Ministry of Trade and Communications and the Ministry of Education, Vormerkscheine (or fractions, depending on the type of film) are required in order to receive presentation permits. Their value in 1936 was fixed at 1,200 schillings.

The system also is applied to sound equipment.

Film distributors who import more than ten features a year are compelled by the Film Bureau of the Vienna Chamber of Commerce to purchase one or two cultural shorts per year (at 4,150 schillings apiece) for obligatory exhibition. Exhibitors are also required to show one Austrian official news reel at each performance and at controlled rentals.

Producers of foreign language versions of Austrian-made features receive permission for the free presentation of one sound film from the country to which the foreign version feature was first sold. This privilege may be increased if the version in question contains propaganda for travel in Austria.

The price of permits for the presentation of films of all kinds produced in countries which handicap the distribution of Austrian films by import embargoes, payment restrictions, censor of scenarios, regulations regarding employment of actors, and so forth, can be increased to 1,000 per cent of the normal amount.

Three Vormerkscheine are required for any number of copies of foreign features imported in the German version whether original or dubbed.

For each copy of a foreign language sound film under 350 meters 10 presentation permits are received for each Vormerkschein; for a film 350 to 700 meters, 5 permits; for a film 700 to 1,000 meters, one permit; two Vormerkscheine are required for each copy of a film 1,000 to 1,500 meters and three per copy for one over 1,500 meters in length.

An understood agreement not stated in the law provides that every fifth feature imported will have text and titles inserted in Austria, in which case and for any other foreign language feature film with German text and titles to be inserted in Austria only one, one and a half and three Vormerkscheine are required for one, two or three or more copies respectively.

During the 1936 summer season (June 12 to August 13), to encourage better programs, the cost of presentation permits for this type of film in one, two and three or more copies was respectively 1,000, 1,500 and 3,000 schillings. Vormerkscheine were not needed as a medium of exchange in this transaction.

Distributors who can prove that they have gone to certain expenditures for the dubbing or synchronizing of a film in Austria receive two Vormerkscheine. Such films are also admitted free of charge for presentation in Austria.

The Film Bureau is authorized, in case a producer of an Austrian feature film sells it at a reasonable price into foreign customs territory, or otherwise shows it abroad, to issue as an export premium such number of additional Vormerkscheine as is fixed by the Ministry of Commerce. These Vormerkscheine remain under control of the Film Bureau and can be used only for obtaining permits for films imported from the same foreign customs territory. Use of this authority can be made only once for each sound feature film.

In case of a disparity between Vormerkscheine issued and used, the Ministry of Commerce can alter any of the foregoing regulations, effective immediately.

The Austrian film industry depends, to a large extent, on the German market. Some 75 per cent of production costs of an Austrian film are covered by its sale to Germany. Receipts from domestic showings only cover 10 to 15 per cent of these costs.

The Austro-German film agreement which has been in force for several years and nominally should not expire until July, 1939, probably will be continued in some form. Due to exchange and transfer difficulties and the expatriate, non-Aryan character of important German producers now turning out Austrian films, mutual quotas have temporarily broken down. According to the old agreement, 120 German feature films without regard to existing contingents are annually exchangeable against 12 Austrian films or at a ratio of 10:1. If either party to the agreement is unable to export up to the full number agreed upon, this does not restrict the fixed total of the other. For example, if Austria is only able to export 10 features during the year in question, Germany is, nevertheless, eligible to ship up to 120 features to Austria free from contingent encumbrances. All additional features beyond the limit set are subject to the ratio of 10:1, thus, Austria in 1936 sent 14 features to Germany and the importation of the two additional features was contingent upon the acceptance of 140 features from Germany. The exchange of news reels, educational and other short films is also fixed at the ratio of 10:1.

The French trade treaty also provides for the contingent-free import of French films. Relatively few, however, are shown in Austria.

Local film censorship was in effect in 1936 for the territory of the City of Vienna and in two other provinces. Posters and other publicity material also are subject to censorship. Censorship in Vienna and in the two provinces of Austria is not handled on a uniform basis. The other six provinces have no local censorship requirements. Federal censorship exists to a slight degree and is exercised by the Ministries of Education and of Trade and Commerce. The former merely examines on request films for eligibility for exhibition to juveniles and the latter Ministry exercises control from the political or economic angle through its power to withhold import and exhibition permits. Local and federal censorship in Austria, however, is not rigid and is no practical obstacle to the importation of foreign feature films. Juveniles under 16 years are admitted only to films bearing the approval of the Ministry of Education. In no case can they attend performances finishing after 9:00 p. m.

The six large American film companies distributing in Austria greatly improved their position in 1936 from the standpoint of volume and turnover. Profits were scanty, however, owing to the high cost of Vormerkscheine (from which German films are exempt) and the necessity of buying one or more expensive Austrian "culture" films each year. The share of the market estimated on an earning basis was German 70%; American 20%; all others 10%; estimated on a footage basis (including copies) it was German 55%; American 35%; all others 10.

The United States has held its own especially in 1936, whereas German films have lost ground. Only about half of the American features are released in more than one copy and seldom more than three, whereas German features often appear simultaneously in as many as eight prints. While American films are shown in good volume, especially in the large first-run houses in Vienna, their profits are not great. German films, although not greater in number, exhibit many more copies throughout Austria—and their overhead (no Vormerkscheine required) is much less.

The regulations for the control of foreign exchange have been greatly relaxed and no difficulty is experienced in securing the necessary valuta.

Copyright relations were established by governmental decree of Sept. 20, 1907; April 9, 1910; March 11, 1925, and Dec. 19, 1929. The new copyright law was promulgated on April 9, 1936, Federal Gazette No. 24, Decree No. 111, A. U.

During 1936 (10 months) the Austrian film industry produced 19 feature sound films and 10 short sound films, compared to 23 and 15 in all 1935, 16 and 155 in 1934, and 15 and 87 in 1933.

The tariff on sound films is 120 gold crowns ($40.70 at current rate) per quintal, plus 4% of duty-paid c.i.f. invoice value.

(1) Local censors' fee—50 schillings ($9.25) per 1,000 meters, but not more than 100 schillings per film. Fee for Federal approval is three groschen per meter plus government stamps.

(2) Amusement ("Lustbarkeits") tax—4 to 20% of gross receipts depending on seating capacity and class of house. This tax has not been changed since December 15, 1933. Films reviewed and passed by the Ministry of Education and cultural shorts recognized as such by that Ministry in most of Austria enjoy a reduction of this tax, varying according to the classification the film has received. In Lower-Austria and Carinthia the amusement tax is entirely eliminated, in six other provinces it is reduced, but in Vienna no reduction in the tax is made for films in these two categories.

(3) Owner or lessee pays usual taxes on earning and personal income, also various Federal or Municipal public welfare taxes (unemployment fund, insurance of employees against illness or accident, pension fund, etc.).

The estimated total of theatres is 765.

Detailed figures on the number of moving picture theatres in the nine provinces of Austria are given in the table below:

Province	Sound	Silent	Total
Vienna	176	2	178
Lower Austria	271	22	293
Upper Austria	71	16	87
Styria	62	10	72
Carinthia	26	7	33
Salzburg	20	6	26
Tirol	19	3	22
Vorarlberg	11	1	12
Burgenland	36	6	42
TOTAL	692	73	765

There are 692 theatres wired for sound. Of these, 271 are in Lower Austria, 176 in Vienna and the remainder, 245, in other provinces.

BAHAMAS

The Commandant of Police has charge of censorship. No gangster films are permitted. The Cinematograph Act of 1912 (Bahamas Laws, Chapter 112) forbids the presentation or exhibition of "any picture, drawing, print, film or representation of any kind, of a treasonable, seditious, profane, blasphemous, immoral, indecent or obscence character."

Of the films shown in the Bahamas, 90 per cent are of American production, the remaining 10 per cent being British.

There is no production whatever. Taxes are considered moderate. The five theatres are wired for sound.

BARBADOS

On Jan. 1, 1936, there was put into effect a compulsory British exhibition quota of 20 per cent on features and 50 per cent on newsreels, the former increasing in the second year to 25 per cent. Due to the lack of British and other foreign films, not being available, the American importations were not effected and consequently increased.

There are no censorship laws in Barbardos. However, there is an Act which requires the appointment of censors fully authorized to reject or change any film received, and their decision cannot be questioned. Local censorship is not considered strict, though a considerable portion are "cut."

Ninety-five per cent of all the films shown are of American make.

There is no admission tax. A Parochial Trade Tax of 8.5% on net profits and a Colonial Income tax on net profits amounting to 2/6 on the pound are levied. These taxes may vary slightly from year to year.

There is no production. The three theatres all are wired for sound. The range of admission prices is 12 to 48 cents for first-run theatres and 6 to 24 cents in the second-run. The average motion picture program consists of a short newsreel, comedy and a feature. One theatre, however, shows double feature programs on week ends. Musical comedies are preferred.

BELGIUM

The serious agitation for local synchronization of foreign pictures has abated, since the various organizations which at one time in 1935 were active for governmental intervention in behalf of the Belgian studios failed to establish their demands, and later disagreed among themselves as to the plan of operation for "dubbing." The result has been the disorganization of formed syndicates. At the moment the American distributors are cooperating with a union of local exhibitors, producers, and other importers and distributors, while refusing to unite with them in a single corporate body.

The only censorship is by the "Commission de Controle" which decides whether a film can be played, children admitted or not. This formality is not obligatory and if a distributor does not care to have his picture approved for projection before children under sixteen years of age, he has the right not to present it at all before the commission. During the 1935-36 season, 473 sound films were released.

Outstanding episodes in scenes to which the Belgian control takes exception are gun play, gambling, kidnaping, extortion, and intimidation. Therefore the attitude of the committee on control toward Wild West pictures is usually to order them so cut as to destroy the continuity.

Sound film distribution is as follows:

	American	German	French	Others
Flemish:
Speaking area	183	64	52	49
French:
Speaking area	138	32	103	22
Brussels	164	32	103	35

Copyright relations were established by Presidential Proclamation on July 1, 1891, extended April 9, 1910 and July 14, 1911.

Two sound films in Flemish and three in French were produced during the 1935-36 season.

Taxes levied on the price of seats in cinemas at present are as follows:

(a) Establishments where the admission price has not exceeded 8 francs during the fortnight collection period taken into consideration:

Seats not exceeding 4 frs., 4% plus 10% of 4% crisis tax plus 25% of 4% town tax, 5.40%.

Seats between 4 and 5 frs., 6% plus 10% of 6% crisis tax plus 25% of 6% town tax, 8.10%.

Seats between 5 and 8 frs., 10% plus 20% of 10% crisis tax plus 25% of 10% town tax, 14.50%.

(b) Establishments where the admission price exceeds 8 francs:

Seats up to 5 frs., 6% plus 10% of 6% crisis tax plus 25% of 6% town tax, 8.10%.

Between 5 and 8 frs., 10% plus 20% of 10% crisis tax plus 25% of 10% town tax, 14.50%.

Between 8 and 12 frs., 12% plus 30% of 12% crises tax plus 25% of 12% town tax, 18.60%.

Above 12 frs., 15% plus 30% of 15% crisis tax plus 25% of 15% town tax, 23.25%.

There are 800 theatres, 740 wired.

Negotiations for commitments are still very difficult, due to exhibitors being very cautious and unwilling to engage themselves for a long period, as they do not know what the general situation of the Belgian market will be in the political situation.

BERMUDA

There are no censorship regulations in Bermuda and such regulations as do exist are purely voluntary beween the manager of the theatre company and the Board of Education. If there is any feeling on the part of the management that objections might be found with any picture, members of the Board of Education and the Clergy of the Colony are invited to see it at a private showing.

One hundred and seventy-four pictures were contracted for in 1936; of these, 150 were American and 24 were British films. American films are popular in the Colony both with the local population and American and Canadian visitors, and it is believed that in the future only British films of exceptional quality will be used.. In 1935 the total number of films shown was 160, of which 36 were British.

There are no film studios in the Colony. On rare occasions portions of American films are made here.

No amusement taxes are levied in the Colony by the Bermuda Government.

Motion picture films, excluding undeveloped films of British origin, are subject to an import duty of one pence, approximately two cents, per 100 feet. Films not of British origin are subject to an import duty of six pence, approximately 12 cents, per 100 feet, plus a surtax of 25 per cent.

There are but two important theatres in the Colony and both are in Hamilton, where shows are given nightly except Sundays. At Somerset and St. George's three shows weekly are given, and weekly shows are given at Bailey's Bay, Prospect, the Dockyard and Southampton, a total of eight houses throughout the Colony. The houses in the City of Hamilton have seating capacity of 385 and 400. The seating capacity at St. George's is 325, at Somerset 325, at Bailey's Bay 250, at Dockyard 200 and at Somerset 325. Admission prices have remained unchanged for several years, and range from 25 cents to 75 cents person, with 50 cents being the regular price for admission to evening shows. Prices for matinees are 25 cents and 35 cents per person. A price of 75 cents per person is occasionally charged for special pictures.

Eight theatres are wired for sound.

BOLIVIA

The only legislative restriction is on transmitting funds abroad.

The Government Decree of Feb. 22, 1926, forbids admittance of children under 12 years to picture houses on week days. Censorship is executed by the various municipalities on moral, religious and political standpoints. It is not strict. Ten pictures were refused release in 1934. These were war pictures and most of them since have been released.

Ninety-eight per cent of films shown are American.

There are no copyright relations with the United States.

No films were produced in the past year. There are no studios in Bolivia.

In Bolivia there are the following national taxes collected in all parts of the country: 10% of gross receipts; stamp tax of from Bx. 0.02 to Bs. 2.50 per ticket according to price. In La Paz there is a 4% municipal tax, a municipal tax on outdoor advertisements, an annual municipal license tax of Bs. 2,000 for first class theaters, and Bs. 1,000 for second class theaters. In the other principal cities of the country, there are, in addition to national taxes, departmental taxes of from 6 to 10% of gross receipts and annual municipal license taxes of from Bs. 1,000 to Bs. 1,500.

Of the 19 theatres in Bolivia, three are in La Paz, two in Sucre, one in Cochabambo and one in Oruro may be considered relatively important. All 19 are wired for sound.

Admission prices range between Bs. 2.50 and Bs. 3.00. Very rarely prices reach Bs. 4.00 for outstanding films. Sometimes prices are reduced to Bs. 1.00 for films already shown several times. The usual program consists of a newsreel, comedy and feature. Most exhibitions run three times a week. Films preferred by the natives are musical comedies and thrillers. English language films enjoy a great preference over European.

BRAZIL

A law requiring exhibitors to show a minimum of 100 meters (328 feet) of domestic film with each program continued to sustain the thirty or more producers of newsreels and short subjects. The action of the Federal Government in offering an annual cash premium for the best picture of this type produced has done much to improve the quality of domestic shorts. Despite this, however, most are technically weak.

Brazilian censorship laws are regarded as reasonable and their application appears to be uniformly fair. Decree No. 21240 of April 4, 1932, sets forth reasons for the whole or partial rejection of a picture by the Board of Censors:

Offense to public decency; Suggestive of crime or other conventional acts; Conveying illusions which might prove prejudicial to international relations; Insulting to race, collective groups or religious sects; Offensive to National dignity or provocative of defiance to public order.

During the ten months from January to October of 1936 a total of 1,215,574 meters (3,899,561 feet) of film was submitted for censorship, of which only 10,700 meters (34,325 feet) or less than 1% was rejected by the censors.

According to the records of the Federal Censorship Bureau of the Ministry of Justice, 86% of all features submitted for censorship in ten months of 1936 were of American origin.

Copyright protection is afforded titles which have been duly registered with the Censorship Board of the Ministry of Justice.

In 1936 a total of 231,000 feet of motion pictures was produced in this country at an approximate cost of $75,000. Of this footage 49,000 feet represented seven features in sound; the balance (182,000 feet) consisted of 530 newsreels and short subjects with sound accompaniment.

Although it may be said that some advancement was made by domestic producers during the year, locally made feature pictures are not regarded as a competitive factor.

There were 1,400 motion picture houses in Brazil at the close of 1936, only 30 dark. Rio de Janeiro and Sao Paulo have 90 and 60 houses, respectively, in operation. One thousand, one hundred seventy theatres are wired for sound. The aggregate seating capacity exceeds 645,000.

BRITISH MALAYA

The agitation for more British films has almost completely died out. The wave of sentiment is now for quality. Films earning the largest gross revenue in 1936 were American.

There was a general improvement in the class of British films shown during 1936, and some attracted large audiences.

The local censor is sure to cut or ban any film which reflects on the prestige of the white race. Murder, gangster, excessive gun play, false imprisonment, or gruesome films are banned, with some concessions to period plays.

The censor fee on newly imported films of 100 feet silent or sound, is S$1.20, copies 30 (Straits) cents per 100 feet. For an appeal, after banning by the censor, the charge is S$1.00. If the appeal is approved the reviewing fee for the whole film is S$10. If the Appeal Board sustains the censor's ban the charge is S$10 per reel for the first five reels and S$5 per subsequent reel.

The light comedy produces more money than any other type. However, Malayan audiences are very partial to their favorite actor or actress. The historical melodramas have been the largest revenue producers, but the number has been limited. There was a noticeable decrease in attendance at animal pictures.

During the first ten months of 1936, the Official Censor of Cinematograph Films of the S.S., F.M.S., and Jehore reviewed 4,183,600 feet of film, of which 2,555,000 feet was American film as against 3,319,500 feet the first nine months of 1935. Last year, 61% of the films reviewed by the Censor during the first ten months was American as compared to 71.6% for the first nine months of 1935. Great Britain supplied 626,500 feet, China 785,000 feet, British Topical 157,900.

Copyright relations are protected under an ordinance known as the Merchandise Marks Act. It is considered sufficient protection to the owner to publish a declaration of ownership in the local newspapers.

Other than some wild animal and native life pictures made in Borneo, no pictures were produced.

There is no taxation on theatres in Malaya. The police however, have a license fee, according to seating capacity. If the theatre seats less than 200, the fee is S$2 a performance; seating not less than 299, S$3; seating not more than 399, S$4; seating 400 and over, S$5. For second and subsequent performances on the same day half of these fees is charged.

There were 122 theatres operating, 96 wired. Two new theatres were opened in Kuala Lumpur and one in Butterworth. Another was under construction at Ipeh. Two open air theatres had obtained permission to operate in Singapore, but it was generally believed that only one would materialize.

Economic conditions of the masses in British Malaya are continuing to improve. This condition has been reflected with increased box office receipts. There is no reason why American films should not continue to dominate the market.

CEYLON

There are no quotas or other restrictions other than the preferential import duty which is two-thirds of one rupee cent per foot in the case of films of British origin and one rupee cent per foot for films of foreign origin.

Films shown in Ceylon practically all come from India where they have been censored. Police have general control of all public performances.

Sixty per cent of pictures shown are American. There is no local production.

Exhibitors are obliged to pay a yearly assessment tax based on seating capacity.

Only 13 of the 18 theatres show regularly; 14 are wired. Eight theatres are in Colombo, two in Kandy and one each in Nuwara Eliya, Jaffna and Galle. Three of the eight in Colombo exhibit, almost exclusively, Indian films in the Tamil, Hindustani and Gujerati languages.

The price of admission varies from 50 rupee cents ($0.18) to Rs. 3.00 ($1.14).

CHILE

The continued control of exchange operations has made difficult the importation of foreign films, most of which are supplied by the United States. Late in 1936 motion picture films were classified as luxuries, for which only gold exchange, at the rate of 35.00 pesos to the dollar as compared to the export draft rate of approximately 26.00 pesos, could be used.

The Censorship Board is considered very liberal. The representatives of one American film company advised that in the last five years only two of its films have been censored, one for moral, the other for political reasons.

Each film when passed by the board is classified as follows: 1) Suitable for children; 2) Suitable for children over 15 years old, and 3) Not recommended for young girls.

The censorship fee is 140 pesos for each feature, and, in the Municipalities of Santiago, Valparaiso and Conception, there is a charge of 40 pesos for the first showing. It is left to each municipality to determine the amount of this fee.

According to Decree Law 558 of Sept. 26, 1925, twenty pesos of each fee go to the National Library for books for its children's section and 20 pesos to a fund for children's playgrounds and popular theatres.

Distribution is estimated as follows: American, 80%; British, 5%; French, 5%; German, 3%; Argentine, 2%; Spanish, 5%.

Spanish language talkies have never been successful in Chile, the general preference being for talking pictures in English with superimposed subtitles.

The types of pictures preferred vary in different sections. Musical productions and society plays are more popular in the downtown theatres of the three chief Chilean cities, whereas the neighborhood houses prefer adventure films. Least popular are those pictures in a foreign language with a great deal of conversation.

Copyright Decree Law No. 345 of March 17, 1925 still applies.

There is no national production, excepting a few shorts of Chilean scenes and industries made under Government auspices.

Municipal taxes vary according to location and classification of the theatre. Decree Law 245 of May 15, 1931, established a scale of fees, ranging from 100 to 1,200 pesos per annum for legitimate theatres, and motion picture houses. These fees were increased 15% in 1936. The municipal license fee charged film distributing organizations is high, amounting in the case of one American company to 3,025 pesos per annum. There are also charges for posters and electric signs.

Government taxes include an admission tax of 10%; income tax of the third category according to which 6% is paid on an income of less than 10,000 pesos; 8% on income between 10,000 and 50,000 pesos, and 10% on income over 50,000 pesos, and a sales tax of 2½% on net income.

According to Anuario Cinematografico early in the year there were 208 theatres operating in Chile, since which time six modern houses have been added in Santiago.

Motion pictures are very popular in Chile and this is especially true of Santiago.

Of the 214 theatres, 189 are wired for sound. Santiago now has 58, all wired; Valparaiso 15, all wired except 1; Vina del Mar, 5, all wired. About 70 of these sound installations were locally assembled, 84 were supplied by two American manufacturers, the remainder being divided among other American and European manufacturers.

COLOMBIA

Censorship comes under the direct control of the National Government. Boards in each departmental capital consist of three members and three alternates (5 members and alternates in the City of Bogota). Once a picture has been passed by two members of any departmental board of censors the law prescribes that it may be exhibited throughout the Republic without further censorship. However, in practice certain departmental boards of censors insist upon approving a previously censored picture before allowing it to be shown in the district under their jurisdiction. Censorship is not strict.

Approximately 80% of the features released are American made. During the past year there has been a considerable increase in the number of British features displayed, and also some increase in the number of French, German and Mexican pictures.

Columbia's basic copyright law dates from 1886 and subsequent laws do not specifically deal with motion pictures. Present copyright laws are considered inadequate. Colombia is not a member of the International Convention.

There are no studios in Colombia, production being limited to occasional news reels and advertising films.

The National Defense Tax of 10% on gross receipts, established by Law 10 of 1932, was modified by Presidential Decree effective as of March 1, 1935, as follows: 5% on tickets up to and including 20 centavos; 6% from 21 to 30 centavos; 7% from 31 to 40 centavos; 8% from 41 to 60 centavos; 10% on tickets of over 60 centavos.

This reduction represents a saving of about 3.5% of the former tax, and lowers direct taxes on the exhibitor to about 20% as compared to 23.5%.

Poster taxes are: for one-sheet posters, 0.80 centavos per set of 30; for two sheet, 1.60 pesos per set of 30; for three sheet, 2.40 pesos per set of 30. (Peso valued at approximately $0.57 U. S.)

Approximately 210 theatres in Colombia, with a total seating capacity of 40,000, include 130 wired and 30 others supplied with portable sound.

There has been the steady increase in the number of non-American films shown. Most competition is from European produced pictures, but films of Latin-American origin also are being marketed. British made films represent the most important competition both from a quality and numerical standpoint.

COSTA RICA

There is a Government censor, appointed by the Governor of San Jose, but the secretary for the interior is the final judge.

During 1936, out of 484 films shown in Costa Rica, 449 were American. No films are produced in Costa Rica.

Copyright courtesies are exchanged.

A tax is imposed by the National Government of 5% of gross receipts. Another tax of 5% is imposed on the net receipts (income tax).

The 37 theatres, all but one wired, seat 20,727.

Theatres present shows daily at 3, 7 and 8:30 p.m. and on Sundays and holidays give additional exhibitions. Tastes are similar to those in the United States, with action pictures in demand. American stars and American pictures in general, with super-imposed titles in Spanish, are preferred. There is a general objection to dubbed Spanish films.

CUBA

In the Gaceta Oficial of June 10, 1936, Extraordinary Edition No. 190, there appeared Decree No. 1556 signed by the President and the Secretary of Interior on June 8, 1936, creating a Cuban Board of Motion Picture Censors in the City of New York. After protests of double censorship the New York board was dropped and censorship was returned to the Habana Censorship Board.

A bill introduced in the Cuban Senate provided for creation of an organization to be known as the Patronato de la Cinematografia Nacional (National Motion Picture Board), to supervise and otherwise assist the development of a motion picture industry on the Island.

The proposed legislation would create an Academia de Cinematografia which would engage the services of cameramen, makeup artists, electricians, and so forth, and organize a section of declamation for motion picture work and provide dancing masters.

This Board would lend financial assistance to Cuban producers.

Funds would be raised by an emission of postage stamps not exceeding a total face value of 100,000 pesos. A special drawing of the National Lottery also was proposed in the bill.

Regulations governing the censorship of films provide for inspection of films by the Film Censorship Board under the jurisdiction of the Department of the Interior (Gobernacion). This board, reorganized in August, 1936, is composed of the Secretary of the Interior and five members.

The Secretaria de Governacion (Department of the Interior) which is charged with the censorship of motion pictures exhibited in Cuba, verbally requested the distributors of news reel films to make an effort to eliminate from such films all scenes showing salutes of the factions engaged in the Spanish civil war.

Films shown are 80 to 85 per cent American. The remaining business is divided among Great Britain, Spain, France, Germany, Mexico and Argentina.

Copyright Act 1909 by Presidential Proclamation, Nov. 17, 1902, was extended April 9, 1910 and Dec. 9, 1920. The new Patent and Trade Mark Law of 1936 gives special protection to motion picture films apart from that under copyright law. Trade mark of manufacturer or producer must have been registered prior to application for registration of film. Application must be held by producer or assignee in Cuba.

There is a bit of production from time to time of news film shots.

Distributors in Habana are subject to a municipal business tax of $375 per year. They are also subject to the Cuban Government tax of 3% on gross receipts and a tax of 1½% on gross sales. In addition, there is a scaled stamp tax on the face value of contracts signed by exhibitors and distributors; ¼% remittance tax, and Maternity Tax of ½% of gross payroll.

About 350 theatres are in operation, 300 wired.

CZECHOSLOVAKIA

American producers resumed distribution on Feb. 8, 1935, after concessions from the instruction of the Ministry of Commerce as of Nov. 16, 1934.

An instruction of the Ministry of Commerce, effective Nov. 16, 1934.

On Jan. 14, 1935, an agreement was reached with the Czechoslovak authorities, providing basically for a free market. The Americans procured a valuable concession which enables them to bring in without payment of the regular 20,000 crowns registration fee one picture dubbed in German for every eight American sound features imported. The companies are permitted to distribute the dubbed film in sections where English sound features have no market because of German competition, that is, in certain districts specifically designated by the local authorities where the majority of the population is German. The granting of this concession, which was important since it presented to American firms operating in the market a unique opportunity of amortizing German dubbed films which they are obliged to produce in Germany and Austria in order to remain in those markets, assured the return of American companies.

A total of 16 such dubbed films were brought in under this arrangement during 1935, and about 14 in the first 10 months of 1936.

Feeling that the voting power which they had in the Czechoslovak Association of Motion Picture Industry and Trade was not commensurate to their importance as distributors, the five branches of American film distributors stepped out of the Association in November, 1936, and established an independent organization known as the Federation of Film Import and Trade in the Czechoslovak Republic. Questions pending, on which the American distributors did not wish the Association to speak for them, included the proposed establishment of a Film Exchange to regulate film distribution and trade and the concentration of power implied therein. Less important was alleged inadequate representation on the Film Advisory Committee. It appeared possible that in addition to the representative of the Association of Motion Picture Industry and Trade a representative of the newly created Federation would be admitted to the Committee.

Censorship, under the Ministry of the Interior, is very strict. A total of 1,081 pictures were censored in 1935, of which 1,060 were released for showing, these including 346 sound features. Twenty-one pictures were banned, of which 13 were American and 5 German. During the January to September period of 1936, 220 feature films were passed by the board. 101 features were of American origin, of which 13 were German versions.

Of the 346 sound features released by the censors, 157 were American, 80 German, 36 Czechoslovak, 20 Austrian, 18 French and 13 British. This indicates the important position American companies have assumed since distribution was resumed Feb. 8, 1935. In 1934 only 25 American features had been authorized for showing. Preliminary returns for the first 10 months of 1936 showed that 111 sound features (including 14 German versions) out of a censored total of 250 features were American.

Reciprocal copyright declarations were exchanged April 27, 1927. Citizens of one country are assured full copyright protections in territory of the other country. This went into effect March 1, 1927, under United States Copyright Act of March 4, 1909 and Czechoslovak Copyright Law of Nov. 24, 1926 and amendment made thereto in Law of April 24, 1936.

During 1935, a total of 24 sound features were produced, of which 21 were in Czech and 3 in other languages (German and French). In addition 6 versions of Czech films were made. In the first nine months of 1936, 19 features produced in Czechoslovakia were passed by the censors.

The A-B Motion Picture Studios showed a net profit of 282,435 crowns from 1935 operations as against 324,504 crowns in 1934. Czechoslovakia's second studio, the "Host", which was in financial difficulties since it was opened in 1934 procured a Government guarantee of credits in an amount of 3,500,000 crowns in October 1936. A third film studio and a color film laboratory were reported as projected.

Taxes are very high. The municipal entertainment taxes average 35% of gross receipts in sound theatres and 25% in silent theatres. The Ministry of Interior prepared a draft of a law which would lower these rates to about 20% and 15%, respectively, and in addition establish differential tax rates for films rated according to cultural value.

There are 1,833 theatres (290 showing daily, 715 two to six times weekly, and 828 once weekly) as against 1,955 at the close of 1933. The total seating capacity was 578,877 persons.

Of all theatres, 1,343 were wired for sound and had a seating capacity of 483,615, representing an increase of 525 theatres in the last two years.

DENMARK

Motion pictures in 1936 were not affected by the Danish import control system which has severely reduced the importation of most other commodities, especially American. However, since July, 1936, import permits have been required for importation of exposed films with Danish text, and as a result such films are now provided with Danish text locally by such firms as Nordisk Films Company A/S, Frederiksberggade 25, and Joh. Ankerstjerna, Lygten 49, both in Copenhagen. A proposal for a new foreign exchange control law was under consideration by the legislature which would extend the system until the end of 1938, but so far as could be ascertained this would not operate to restrict the importation of films.

The supreme court in Denmark on Oct. 14, 1934, sustained a decision of a lower court granting an injunction to Nordisk Films Company A/S, Copenhagen, forbidding the showing in Denmark of American pictures using the so-called "noiseless intensity system" on the ground that this use infringed the Fetersen & Poulsen patents held by Nordisk Films Company A/S.

Two American film companies refused to sign the agreement, claiming that their films, which are re-recorded on special equipment, are not covered by the Nordisk Film Patent. The lower court in these cases upheld the legality of showing these re-recorded films without payment of a license fee and the case was appealed to the supreme court which in the early part of 1936 affirmed the decision. Nevertheless, one of these companies made an agreement obliging itself to pay 700 kroner for each film shown using the "noiseless" patent. The other American company, which won its case, continued to import its own re-recorded films.

Efforts are being made to enforce the Petersen & Poulsen patents in Sweden, England, Norway and Poland.

The Danish film censoring bureau in the fiscal year 1935-36, ended March 31, reviewed a total of 2,187 films (including copies and advertising) having a length of 1,713,120 meters as compared with 1,884 films with a total length of 1,446,140 meters the year before.

Of the 2,187 films (including copies), 1,097 having a total length of 973,960 meters were American (corresponding figures for the previous year were 821 and 740,000), 279 totaling 206,740 meters were Danish (194 and 278,840); 253 totaling 265,770 meters were German (163 and 192,110); 61 totaling 66,245 meters were Swedish (57 and 76,840); 57 totaling 72,000 meters were British (46 and 49,085).

No dubbed films were exhibited in 1936.

All films shown publicly in Denmark must be censored by Statens Films-censur (The Government Film Censor), Frederiksholmskanal 27, Copenhagen, under the jurisdiction of the Ministry of Justice.

In 1935-36 the censor gave approval to 2,092 films, including copies, having a length of 1,499,410 meters as opposed to 1,750 films, including copies, having a length of 1,152,095 meters in 1934-35.

In all, 86 films were forbidden for children as against 129 films in 1934-35.

Sixteen millimeter films became more popular in 1935-36, and 120 of them were shown.

Censor fees are 6 ore per meter (one krone equals 100 ore, about 22 cents) for Danish and foreign films except newsreels and advertising films, for which the fee is 3 ore per meter.

A total of 229 feature films were released in the first 9 months of 1936 as compared with 285 during the same months of 1935. American leadership made further advance on a percentage basis, from 59% of all films shown in 1935 to about 64% in 1936. Of the total releases through September, 1936, 147 were American as against 170 in the corresponding period of 1935. German producers increased their participation from 40 films in 1935 to 41 in 1936, or from 14% to 18%. British releases dropped from 30 in 1935 to 11 in 1936, or from 10% to 5%.

Two American historical films were especially well received.

Copyright relations, established by Presidential Proclamation May 9, 1893, were extended April 9, 1910, and Dec. 9, 1920.

Production

Nordisk Films Company A/S, Frederiksberggade 25, Palladium A/S, Axelborg, and Teatrenes Filmskontor (Asa Film) Jernbanegade 4, all of Copenhagen, are the only Danish producers of features. The other companies specialize in advertising films or short subjects.

Each of these producers owns one sound studio. The studio owned by Nordisk Film Company A/S has four stages and one sound recording apparatus, a Danish Petersen & Poulsen recorder. The Palladium A/S studio has two stages and a Bofa sound system (made by Bang and Olufsen, Struer, Denmark), Teatrenes Films-kontor (Asa Flm) has one stage and a German Bauer sound apparatus.

Only 6 features were released by Danish producers in 1936 as compared to 10 in 1935. Three were produced by Palladium, two by Teatrenes Films-kontor, and one by Nordisk Films Company. No films were produced in cooperation with Swedish or other foreign producers in 1936.

The Danish film industry claims that the existing amusement tax of 40 per cent of box office receipts is too heavy in view of the limited size of the market for Danish films, and has petitioned the government for relief.

The three films released by Palladium in 1935 were "Snushanerne" (The Prying Fellows), "Millionmordrengen" (The Millionaire Boy), and "Panserbasse" (The Cop). The two films released by Teatrenes Filmskonter were "Sol over Denmark" (Sunshine over Denmark) and "Cirkus Revuen" (The Circus Revue), while the title of the only film produced by Nordisk Films Company A/S in 1936 was "6' Traekning" (Sixth Lottery Drawing).

Taxes

Exhibitors in Denmark are burdened with a 40% tax on receipts.

In the fiscal year 1934-35 ended March 31 (the latest year for which statistics are available), the amusement tax on films yieded 6,491,725 kroner (5,909,975 kroner in 1933-34). Of this amount 3,378,879 kroner was returned by Copenhagen theatres (3,124,426 in 1933-34).

The total box office turnover at all Danish motion picture theatres was approximately 14,775,000 kroner in 1933-34 and 16,230,000 kroner in 1934-35.

Films of special social or educational value may be exempted from tax by the Ministry of Justice. Four or five films are granted this privilege each year.

On April 1, 1936, there were 352 theatres in Denmark as against 340 the year before. The generally improved business conditions in 1936 benefited owners of theatres, and receipts from ticket sales, particularly in the urban districts, are estimated to have been above those for 1935.

American productions strengthened their foothold as did other foreign films. Danish films continued to exercise great drawing power, but because their market is limited to one small country it is difficult to keep a high artistic standard and at the same time make a profit. Competition among local firm exchanges was enhanced by the establishment of several new offices.

Most important of the new theatres are "Bella Bio" in Copenhagen with about 900 seats (German Bauer sound installation) and "Slotsbiografen" in Randers with about 500 seats (Danish Bofa sound installation). The first named is a first-run.

A number of older theatres were reconstructed, particularly in the provinces.

No theatres are owned by foreign producers or distributors, and there are no chain theatres, both such forms of ownership being impossible under provisions of the Danish motion picture law.

The table which follows lists Danish cinemas according to seating capacity, number of performances given yearly and the annual license fee to which they are subjected.

Greater Copenhagen (including suburbs) with a population of 900,000 had 44 theatres on Jan. 1, 1936, with a total seating capacity of 26,874 as against 41 theatres with 24,578 seats a year previous.

Statistics pertaining to greater Copenhagen indicate that attendance increased from 10,081,000 in 1934 to 11,020,000 in 1935, a gain of 947,000 or about 9%. The increase in ticket sales in Copenhagen proper continued in 1936, its cinema having sold 5,127,931 tickets in the first eight months of 1936 as compared with 4,975,840 tickets in the same months of 1935, a gain of 152,091 or 3%.

DOMINICAN REPUBLIC

Laws affecting the motion picture industry are confined to those imposing taxes on undertakings and admission prices and such as restrict the admission of minors.

Censorship is exercised by a municipal commission. While there is no national law in regard to censorship, the municipal ordinance of Santo Domingo or a practically identical one has been adopted by the other municipalities. Censorship is very strict.

In 1936 the censors forbade the showing of at least two pictures.

Ninety-five per cent of the films shown are American, the other 5% British.

The title of each film might be registered under the Dominican trade mark law, but no occasion has yet arrived to resort to this recourse.

There is no production in this market.

Taxes are high. Theatres, in addition to the regular property taxes assessed against real estate of any class, must pay a special tax of 40 cents per annum for each seat. Tax on admission is 2 cents per admission up to 20 cents and 10% of the admission price above 20 cents.

There are 23 theatres, all wired. Two new sound houses were installed in 1936, one additional theatre was opened in Santiago, and one was closed in Moca. The total seating capacity of the 23 theatres is 10,400.

The range of admission prices is reported from 5 and 10 cents up to 40 cents for specials. Programs consist of a feature and a comedy or cartoon.

EAST AFRICA

The Film Censorship Board has wide powers over silent and sound films, and posters and advertising matter.

There are censorship boards at Nairobi, Kenya Colony; Dar-es-Salaam, Tanganyika Territory; Kampala, Uganda Protectorate; and Zanzibar. Gangster films seldom are passed. This is especially true in the Uganda Protectorate.

Most films shown are American, at least 75%. With the improved quality of British films, the number exhibited has greatly increased.

There is no production in East Africa.

Taxes are very moderate.

The theatre at Eldoret, Kenya Colony, burned down, and one theatre at Kampala, Uganda Protectorate, and another at Nairobi, Kenya Colony, equipped for sound, were not operating. Of a total of 13 theatres in East Africa, all sound, 11 were operating as follows:

Country	Town	Sound
Kenya:	Nairobi	3
	Mombasa	2
	Nakuru	1
Tanganyika:	Dar-es-Salaam	2
	Tanga	1
Uganda:	Kampala	1
Zanzibar:	Zanzibar	1
Total		11

There were two portable sound outfits in Kenya Colony.

It is possible that in 1937, four more theatres equipped for sound will be constructed; at Mombasa, Kenya Colony; Tanga and Mwanza, Tanganyika Territory, and Kampala, Uganda Protectorate.

ECUADOR

A decree of Aug. 8, 1887, known as the law of Authors' and Artists' Proprietary Rights (Ley de Propiedad Literaria y Artistica) protects writers and artists, but this law is antiquated and its provisions do not cover the rights of producers and exhibitors. Consequently the laws make it impossible to enforce exclusive rights to films by punishing the showing of them by unauthorized concerns, and do not give any protection to the rights of producers. It is understood, however, that each individual film can be registered, and in that way the exclusive right to show that particular film in Ecuador can be obtained.

Difficulties are still encountered by most distributors in obtaining foreign exchange for payment of rentals of films, although film imports have been exempt from the principal provisions of the control of foreign exchanges established by an executive decree of July 30, 1936.

A board of censors, established in each province by executive decree, provides that only especially prepared films or those receiving special permission may be shown for children. However, the law is not enforced.

American pictures are 85% of those shown. It is reported that there has been a slight increase in the showing of foreign films because of the advent of low-priced Mexican films circulating at the lesser theatres. Twelve German, eight British, four Mexican, and two Argentine pictures were exhibited in the first ten months of 1936. Quito appears to be a better market for foreign films than Guayaquil. The competition of foreign films in Ecuador cannot be regarded as significant but it is the opinion of one distributor that this is partly due to lack of efficient distribution.

Copyright relations were determined by the Inter-American Copyright Convention at Buenos Aires, Aug. 12, 1910.

No moving pictures, either silent or sound, were produced in Ecuador. The small market would not warrant a domestic studio. A number of scientific and semi-scientific expeditions have been taking pictures in Ecuador, specially in the Oriente region.

In accordance with an executive decree of Jan. 30, 1926 (Registro Oficial No. 170, Feb. 2, 1926 and No. 322, May 12, 1930), the municipalities are authorized to collect up to 10 per cent on the gross receipts of theatres. In Guayaquil this tax is 10 per cent; Quito 8 per cent, and in other cities it ranges from 5 to 7 per cent. A tax of 10 centavos for national defense is collected on all admissions except for the cheaper seats.

There are 34 theatres seating 40,765 and all sound-equipped. These do not include the various projection rooms generally in club buildings in a dozen towns and villages. Total shows were approximately 240 a month. Total seating capacity is estimated at 6,000.

An important development in 1936 was the establishment of a circuit service, with portable equipment, which covers the small villages on the railroad line of Guayaquil to Riobamba, the chief centers being Alausi and Huigra, important railroad stations where there are school buildings and club houses of the railroad workers.

EGYPT

Nationalistic propaganda is fostering the development of local sound film production in Arabic, since most Egyptians are not acquainted with foreign languages. A proposal has been made to the Egyptian Government by the local film industry for a compulsory use of a quota of Egyptian films in relation to foreign films.

The sole effective propaganda against foreign films is being conducted by Jewish sympathizers against films produced in Germany. Not more than three German films have been shown in Egypt since the anti-semitic movement began in that country.

By decree which appeared in the Journal Officiel No. 54 of May 7, 1936, the Egyptian Government promulgated the International Convention of October, 1933, to facilitate the circulation of educational films.

By decision of the Ministry of Interior, films produced locally should be accompanied by a certificate issued by the Censorship Office of that Ministry.

Every film must be submitted for approval to a censorship committee, with a fee of five shillings a film, except for short comedies, reviews of world news, musical extracts, cartoons, educational or cultural subjects, or any film taken in Cyprus of less than 35 millimeters in width.

Posters and advertising matter also are subject to censorship, with exemption for "any slide, handbill or leaflet which displays only the title and class of the film and the names of the actors," and "any locally produced program, handbill or leaflet relating to a film which has been approved by a Censorship Committee or the Board."

Seventy-eight per cent of pictures shown are American, 10% French, 8% British, 4% Egyptian and all other countries.

The Mixed Tribunals deal with infringement of trade-marks, copyrights and patents under the principles of general law and rules of equity. There are no specified laws regarding this.

Egypt's motion picture industry has made some progress since its establishment in 1927. The production of films, however, consists mainly of Arabic features. In the 1936-37 season only five films were made and five others were in the cutting room, in comparison with 13 films produced in the 1935-36 season. Most of the films are made for account of individuals who pool their capital as a speculative venture. These films enjoy long runs generally in native theatres in Egypt and nearby Arabic-speaking countries.

There are 5 small studios operating intermittently in Egypt and their equipment is relatively unimportant. The only large and up-to-date studio, inaugurated in October, 1936, is that of the Societe Misr pour le Theatre et al Cinema. The company so far has produced one musical melodrama and 6 or 7 newsreels, but plans to work out an extensive production program, including a regular weekly news service and shorts on tourist propaganda.

The Egyptian Government has been induced to modify the amusement tax of Dec. 11, 1933, which worked out roughly on a 10 per cent scale, but with a minimum of P. T. 5 (approximately 25c) per seat on tickets for theatres and other public places of amusement in Cairo, Alexandria and their environs. This tax has a serious effect on second and third run houses, as in many cases the P. T. 5 minimum represents a tax of 15 to 30 per cent, considering the very low price of tickets. The new taxation plan enforced as from Jan. 3, 1935, applies a 10 per cent scale on all categories up to P. T. 5. For tickets between P. T. 5 and P. T. 10 the tax is P. T. 1 and from P. T. 10 to P. T. 250 the tax is 10 per cent of the next highest even ten; i. e., for P. T. 231 the tax would be P. T. 24, etc. From P. T. 250 to P. T. 400 the tax is 10 per cent of the next highest even fifty; i. e., for P. T. 305 the tax would be P. T. 35. From P. T. 500 to P. T. 1,000 the tax is 10 per cent of the next highest even hundred; i. e., for P. T. 702 the tax is P. T.80. Over P. T. 1,000 the tax continues at 10 per cent for every hundred or fraction.

On March 21, 1935, import duty on developed positive films was raised from L. E. 1 to L. E. per kilogram (L. E. 1 equal $5, approximately), but reduced on May 9, 1935, to L. E. 2.5 per kilo net.

There are 102 theatres in Egypt, all wired, including 10 military theatres for the British troops. Of these, ten or twelve operate in the open air during the long summer season only, while eight or ten indoor theatres close during the summer months. None has air conditioning.

EL SALVADOR

Censorship is very strict. A board exists which reviews all pictures. Pictures are banned on the request of foreign ministers accredited to the Government of El Salvador. Communistic and socialistic films are closely watched.

Ninety per cent of product shown is American. Mexican, Spanish-speaking pictures are popular with the masses. Copyright relations were determined by the Convention at Mexico, Jan. 27, 1902.

The one producing company formerly operating, principally on newsreels, has gone out of business.

Taxes on admissions are as follows: Tickets of 15 to 24 centavos, tax one centavo; of 25 to 49, 2 centavos; of 50 to 99, three centavos; of 1 colon and over, five centavos. (Two and a half centavos equal one U. S. cent.)

On performances the taxes vary with time of performance and locality. Maximum ¢12 ($4.80); minimum ¢3.50 ($1.40).

Of the 29 theatres, seating 36,000, all but two are wired for sound.

The average program consists of a long feature, occasional comedy, newsreel, a usual total of 10 reels. There are about 5 releases each week, 3 to 5 performances daily in San Salvador. Films ordinarily are given one Sunday feature showing. American stars are preferred, speaking the English language. Spanish talkers are second. Dubbed films are not well received.

ESTONIA

Fewer American pictures are being shown according to the import quotas the Government allotted to distributors for the year ending June 30, 1937. The quotas of the three principal distributors of American films were reduced by from 20 to 50 per cent, although the total of all quotas remains about the same (220, for the 1936/37 year; 226 for the preceding 12 months).

The aim of the Government, it appears, was not so much to reduce imports as to get distribution into the hands of Estonians. This does not mean merely Estonian citizens, but also persons of the Estonian race. The principal distributors in Estonia of American films are Estonian citizens, but their racial origin is not Estonian.

Censorship is under the film inspector of the Ministry of the Interior. Films approved by him are further passed upon by the Estonian Ministry of Education and Social Welfare, for admittance of minors. Advertising carries an announcement whether a film may be attended by minors.

American product is 35% of all shown; German, 44%.

Estonia is a member of the Berne Copyright Union.

The one film laboratory is operated by the endowment "Eesti Kulturfilm" at Tallinn. Local production is mostly news reels and educational films.

Taxes are high. The tax on film imports is computed on the basis of the data relating to the length of films as contained in the shipping documents accompanying the imported films. Pictures which are not admitted shall be taxed at the rate of one-quarter of a cent per meter length for control expenses.

The tax, in case of foreign made films, shall be payable at the time of the importation of such films when applying for the grant of the import license, and, in the case of films produced in Estonia, at the time of presentation of such films for registration.

Of the 58 theatres in operation in Estonia, 55 have sound.

FINLAND

Censorship is provided for by three decrees issued by the Government on Oct. 30, 1935. The first decree itemizes the types of films which shall not be approved for exhibition. The second decree provides for appointment by the Ministry of Education of a Government Film Censorship Bureau comprising one film censor and three associates who are charged with reviewing films intended to be exhibited publicly and stipulating the class of amusement taxes applicable when the film is exhibited. All expenses of the Censorship Bureau are borne by the Finnish Cinema Association. The third decree provided for formation of a Government Film Commission (in Finnish, Valtion Filmilautakunta) of five persons appointed by Ministry of Education to render final judgment, at the request of the owner of the film and at the owner's expense, on any film prohibited by the Censorship Bureau from being exhibited.

During 1935 of the features shown, 65 per cent were American, short subjects 55% American, 30% domestic.

Copyright laws were enacted in Finland on June 3, 1927, and modified by the law of Jan. 31, 1930. Finland entered into reciprocal copyright relations with the United States on Dec. 8, 1934, effective Jan. 1, 1929. On April 1, 1928, Finland became a member of the Berne copyright convention of Nov. 13, 1908.

Six features and 186 short subjects were produced in 1935, eight features in 1936.

According to the law of Dec. 21, 1932, effective Jan. 15, 1933, films exhibited in Finland are subjected to the following taxation: Art films, 15% of admission charge; other films, 30%.

If a minimum of 200 meters of domestically produced film is exhibited at a performance the tax shall be reduced by 5%. In practice, therefore, exhibitions of films in the art class are taxed 10 per cent and other films 25 per cent, as 200 meters of Finnish film usually are shown at every performance.

Of the 220 theatres, all but 10 are wired. There are also 7 mobile theatres.

FRANCE

(Also see special article, elsewhere in this issue, by Pierre Autre, Almanac correspondent in Paris)

Of outstanding importance in the legislative field was the completion of the Franco-American trade agreement which went into effect on June 15, 1936. In signing this agreement the French Government abandoned the proposals made earlier in the year to control and restrict the trade in foreign films and the exhibition of foreign films in France. Under the trade agreement the American film interests are protected to the extent that the present treatment was guaranteed and assurance was given that no new measures would be taken to place American films in a less favorable position. Assurance was further given that the import duty, together with the valuations upon which the ad valorem duty was assessed, should not be increased. The reduction of the import tax from 6% to 2% also was applied to motion picture films.

A proposal in 1937 by the Cinema Workers' Syndicate called for the placing of complete government control over the industry, with higher pay, shorter hours, and practically complete restriction of production to France.

A decree of May 7, 1936, established an export control over films in that it required that all films for export should receive the special export visa of the Cinema Control Service. The authorities were given the power to refuse this special export visa to any film whose presentation in foreign countries might be considered prejudicial to the French national interests.

This export control measure was vigorously opposed by the French producers as well as by the American distributors, most of whom use Paris as a distributing center for Europe. The combined opposition was so strong that the export control section of the decree soon was suspended.

During the year a very comprehensive report on the film situation was presented to the National Economic Council. This report contained recommendations for reorganization of the motion picture industry in France which, if adopted, would cause considerable difficulties for American film interests.

The French industry, at the urgent instance of the Blum cabinet, organized in a fairly effective fashion. The new organization, known as the Confederation Generale de la Cinematographie, included representatives from the principal groups representing all branches of the industry—production, distribution, technicians and raw material manufacturers and exhibitors. There were, of course, still a few independents, but the Confederation, grouping the following organizations, included the larger part of the industry, as follows:

1. Chambre Syndicale des Industries Techniques de la Cinematographie—Includes all the technical branches of the industry, particularly the manufacture of raw film.

2. Chambre Syndicale de la Production de Films —French film producers.
3. Chambre Syndicale des Distributeurs de Films—The United States exhibitors are represented on this group.
4. Union des Chambres Syndicales des Theatres Cinematographiques—The exhibitors' group.

There was no change during the year in the regulations covering non-inflammable films.

Censorship Consolidated

A decree of May 7, 1936, consolidated the censorship powers held by the French Government. The decree included a provision whereby foreign producers and distributors risked the loss of their French market if any of their films (even though exhibited outside of France) should not meet with the approval of the French censorship board.

Another feature of the decree was that it required that films be submitted for the approval of the Cinema Control Commission at least eighty days before their public presentation. In the past the French authorities often were allowed insufficient time to review a film before its presentation.

The censorship regulations also were applied to news reels, the police power having previously been exercised by the Ministry of the Interior.

Representatives of the leading ministries reviewed newsreels before release and made suggestions for cuts. There were occasions when, after the newsreels had been released and the reaction of the public to certain items had been unfavorable, further cuts were obtained by the interested ministries.

American films still lead all other foreign films here in popularity, with a preference for original versions (with sub-titles) in the first-run theatres of Paris and in a few of the resort centers. Dubbed versions, however, are generally used in the provincial houses.

German films have lost ground very rapidly; only rarely is a real German film seen even in Paris. A few Austrian films (original versions) have had a considerable success at one Paris theatre (Etoile Cinema), and a few Russian films have been shown with varying success.

There is a growing tendency throughout France to put on double feature programs. This is generally not the case with the first-run houses, but in the second-run theatres of Paris, and very generally throughout the provinces, two features are shown on each program, and very often newsreels as well.

Copyright relations are governed by the bilateral treaty of 1918.

Production of motion picture films in France in 1936 approximated 125. In addition to the films entirely produced here, it was estimated that 188 foreign films were dubbed into French.

Decree on Taxes

The following is the text of decree concerning taxes:

ARTICLE 1.

Fourth paragraph of article No. 474 of indirect taxes is changed by the following one:

Motion Picture Theatres—monthly taxes on the net receipts of the motion picture theatres are, according to steps:

2% up to 10,000 francs net monthly receipts.
5% above 10,000, and up to 30,000 francs net monthly receipts.
10% above 30,000, and up to 50,000 francs net monthly receipts.
15% above 50,000, and up to 100,000 francs net monthly receipts.
20% above 100,000 francs net monthly receipts.

ARTICLE 1.

The rates of the tax on moving picture theatres as fixed by Article 88 of the decree of codification of December 28, 1926, and 47 of the law of April 16, 1930, are amended as follows:

2% up to 10,000 francs net monthly receipts.
5% above 10,000, and up to 30,000 francs net monthly receipts.
10% above 30,000, and up to 50,000 francs net monthly receipts.
15% above 50,000, and up to 100,000 francs net monthly receipts.
20% above 100,000 francs net monthly receipts.

The second paragraph of Article 90 of the decree of codification of Dec. 28, 1926, modified by Article 40 of the decree of July 19, 1934, concerning fiscal readjustments, is redrafted as follows:

"Tax rates are reduced 50% for music halls, bicycle races, moving picture shows with the exception of the receipts included in the first category of taxes, cafes-concerts, dance halls at fairs, merry-go-rounds and shooting galleries at fairs, operated or organized outside Paris, and, in all localities, for amusement parks to which a general entrance fee is charged in addition to the side-shows, as well as for concerts not given daily by musicians' associations or by societies subsidized by the State, by departments or by communes to give concerts of classical music." Which means cinemas outside Paris pay only 50 percent (half) of the taxes rates of the Article One.

ARTICLE 3.

Municipal towns will be allowed to reduce the socalled "Pauper taxes" on all kinds of entertainments provided they find some other way of getting the same money.

ARTICLE 4.

From the date of promulgation of the foregoing law, any contracts having as object the showing in public of a moving picture film will become binding upon the parties thereto only after the expiration of a 48-hour delay following the trade showing or the first public showing of such film. Paris 25 Juillet 1935.

There are approximately 4,100 motion picture theatres in France, all but 200 of them wired for sound.

FRENCH WEST INDIES

There appears to be no censorship practiced in this Colony although by decree of the President of France dated May 16, 1935, and published in the Journal Official of Martinique of June 15, 1935, there was established a censorship of films and a commission composed of the Secretary General of the Colony, or his delegates; the Prosecutor of the Colony or his delegate; a representative of the Commandment of the troops; a representative of the Chief of Public Instruction; and the President of an organization known as the "Syndicat d' Initiative." There is no record extant of any films being refused censorship, and children of all ages are admited to theatres at any time.

French and American films predominate.

French copyright laws apply.

There is no production in Martinique or the island colony of Guadeloupe.

Taxes are moderate and vary according to locality, city and town.

There are 11 theatres in Martinique, seating 8,000. These are in the following cities: Fort-de-France, 3; Lamentin, 2; Vauclin, 2; Trinito, 2. All other towns on the island have two buildings where pictures are shown. All theatres have two or three showings a week, and no theatres are properly wired for sound. Admission prices in the cities range from Frs. 5.00 to Frs. 15.00 and in the smaller towns and villages from Frs. 3.00 to Frs. 10.00 (Note a Fr. is equal to 6.6 cents). In the cities and larger towns where prices of admission are higher, the program consists of one newsreel and one feature. Sunday nights when there is an increase in the prices a short comedy is included. In the low price villages only one picture is shown. Features are shown twice, usually at the 6 p.m. showing and again at the 9 p.m. performance. The picture then starts its trip around the island and is returned to Fort-de-France where it again is shown for one day. It is then sent around the island for one or two showings and this moving about is repeated several times or until it is worn out. Of course if the demand for a picture is enough to warrant repeated showings in each city or village, it is shown until the demand ceases.

Any picture is acceptable so long as French is used. American films, "dubbed" in French, are not objected to by the theatregoers. The amount of the tax on each admission is included in the cost of the ticket.

The remarks made in the foregoing under Martinique apply equally to the industry as established in Quadeloupe with the following exceptions: There are two motion picture houses, similar to those established in Martinique, operating in Pointe-a-Pitre; and it is assumed that each town and village on the island has at least one place where films are shown.

Fifteen theatres in the French West Indies are wired for sound.

GERMANY

The industry continued under about the same regulations as during the previous year: 1. The Film Bank continued as part of the Film Chamber. 2. The single feature show is now general. 3. Fixation of minimum entrance prices was for elimination of cutthroat competition and to provide preferential admissions for members of the uniformed ranks, the unemployed, and so on. 4. Exhibitors remained organized in a single body within the Film Chamber, which has accomplished much to correct the earlier system of sharp practices and irregularities. 5. Theatres are obliged to show together with every standard feature one "culture" film of at least 300 meters. 6. The Reichsfilmkammer has ruled that one-half of film production must be completed by the beginning of the film season (July) and the other half by the beginning of October.

New Contingent Regulations

On July 1, 1936, new contingent regulations were issued. On the whole, the wording of these is practically the same as that of the old ones, but the few alterations made are of great importance. Although the United States is not explicitly mentioned in these regulations, they are undoubtedly directed against the American film industry.

It will be recalled that foreign features are admitted into Germany either against internal contingent licenses or external contingent licenses. The first are earned by distributors in proportion to domestic production released, and the second by producers in proportion to the receipts from German films shown abroad. Internal licenses are non-transferable, while the export licenses may be transferred. After considerable effort on the part of American film companies, the Ministry of Propaganda lowered the price for export contingent licenses in 1935 from RM 20,000 to RM 10,000. A further reduction is granted if a foreign feature is dubbed in Germany, the price of the contingent license being decreased according to the dubbing costs (the latter including actors' salaries, studio costs, costs of German film material. For the first RM 20,000 of dubbing costs the license price will be lowered by RM 1,000, and for every additional RM 5,000, by another RM 1,000. When the contingent certificate is transferred, the American company has to pay the seller of the license RM 5,000, the balance being determined with the Contingent Office after the dubbing costs have been fixed. In a few exceptional cases, especially where films are either technically interesting or for political reasons suitable for Germany, the Ministry of Propaganda has the right to grant the foreign film producers an import license without fee.

The American exchanges for the most part bring their feature product to the market against export licenses and for the past few years have used very few of the internal licenses. It appears that with the internal license American producers have not always been satisfied with the way in which their product was handled by German film renters, who in most cases are closely connected with German producers.

In spite of the reduction in the cost of a contingent license, the high price in effect places the German market for American films in the prohibitive class. The regulations concerning the use of blocked marks also have been considerably strengthened. All these difficulties eventually will force a decision from the American companies as to whether they will participate to a greater extent in domestic production by producting locally themselves or by distributing locally made products, or whether they will entirely withdraw from the country. Twentieth-Century-Fox, MGM and Paramount still had their offices in Germany in May, 1937.

Censorship

In order to meet the demands of the Nazi moral code, censorship has been greatly intensified and is most vexatious to film importers, particularly to Americans. As has been officially declared, the aim of German film politics is to import American "super" films but exclude average American films from competition with the German product. The pre-censorship, under the direction of the Ministry of Propaganda, through the inspection of films prior to submittal to the Board of Censorship, or the reading of manuscripts or scenarios by the office of the Film Critic of the Ministry, is considered in the trade to have slowed up the machinery of production, the more so as it serves to increase the Ministry's arbitrary control. Sometimes, however, it is advantageous in that it obviates difficulties with the Board of Censors by aiding producers and distributors to determine the types of film and story that the German public may be expected to appreciate, and, consequently, the German censors to approve. The apparent severity of the censorship policy would indicate a market supply of domestic films of distinctly national character.

Under the film law, censorship is now centered in Berlin alone, instead of Berlin and Munich.

Contingent licenses are no longer sacrificed when films to which they were applied are rejected by the censors.

Comparative Distribution

On the basis of official censorship figures, 201 features were shown in 1935, of which 94 were German, 50 American and 67 "other foreign" films. During the previous year, the total was 196, including 122 German, 37 American and 37 "other foreign" films. Thus during 1935, foreign films accounted for 53.2 per cent of the total market supply as against 37.8 per cent during the previous year.

In the 1935-36 film season, there were 187 first-runs in Berlin, as against 188 in the previous season. Of the 1935-36 total, 108 included films of German origin, 35 of American origin and 44 of "other foreign" origin. As compared with the previous season, there was an increase of 4 in German first-runs and a decline of 5 in American. It is noteworthy that domestic production made up 57.7% of the Berlin first-run market in 1935-36, American features 18.7 per cent and "other foreign" 23.6 per cent. Germany's annual requirements for standard features approximate 250. In consequence of both decreased domestic production and import difficulties, this normal need has not been satisfied since 1933.

Copyrights

Anticipated Government action in regard to copyrights had not been taken when this report was written. It appears, however, that no important changes in existing law and practice are to be expected. The committee to consider the principles involved and make recommendations, has concluded that

1. Only the author is entitled to copyright, and according to the general principle of German copyright the author is the one who wrote the story;

2. On the other hand, the right to exploit the film, including reproduction, distribution, public performance, translation, synchronization, and so on, is held to belong exclusively to the producer. This is in accordance with regulations already in force, but in the new interpretation the producer's right is based, not as hitherto on copyright, but on a newly defined right of exploitation ("Verwertungsrecht"). The right to proceed against persons who through alteration, mutilation or insertion spoil the film, belongs formally to the author, but in practice would be actually exerted by the producer.

As compensation for the rights of the composer of the musical score, an amount is to be paid, according to the seating capacity of the theatre, of between RM 0.90 and RM 1.30 per seat per annum, or about 1 per cent of gross receipts.

Production

Production during the past two years compares as follows:

1934	Number	Length (in meter)
Features	129	314,345
Shorts and educational films	1,891	554,007
Total	2,020	868,352
Features	130	315,510
Shorts and educational films	2,072	509,127
Total	2,202	824,637

The number of film producers declined from 83 in 1928 to 49 in 1933, and the number of distributors from 41 to 22. This decrease was due partly to the elimination of "non-Aryan" firms. During the past season the program of eliminating from the German film industry all persons classified as "unreliable" or "un-German" was brought to completion and, as a result, membership in the distributors' association was reduced to two-thirds that of the previous year and other branches of the industry were silimarly affected.

Production costs, including the cost for culture film and news reel, though difficult to determine, are estimated to have reached RM 50,000,000 (about $20,000,000 at RM 2.50) as against an estimated total of RM 30,000,000 (about $12,000,000) in 1933. In 1935 the average production cost of a feature is said to have been $160,000 as against $120,000 in 1934. In exceptional cases, however, especially if the film is destined for export, production costs are as much as $320,000. Star salaries, in general, do not exceed 25 per cent of the total production costs.

German film producers suffer from a lack of sufficient capital. In most cases, the producer himself has only a small part of the money necessary, and the means of the Film Credit Bank are not sufficient to cover his need. The producer, therefore, must rely more and more on the financial suport of the distributors, who, on their part, will have to borrow some of the money required from the theatre owners. Thus it happens that distributors, as well as theatre owners, have gained a tremendous influence over the production of films and the selection of actors.

Production costs average RM 160-180 a meter of long features and about RM 10 a meter for cultural films. During the past two or three years production costs have increased 70 to 80 per cent, while domestic receipts have risen only 30 to 40 per cent and export income has heavily declined. This has resulted in a serious decrease in the earning power of the whole German film industry, in consequence of which there was a deficit for the past season estimated at between RM 8,000,000 and RM 10,000,000.

Distributors' turnover in 1935 amounted to $28,000,000 as compared with $25,600,000 in 1934.

The output of German copying studios during the season 1935-36 was estimated at about 10,000,000 meters of negatives and 60,000,000 meters of positives of standard films, to which must be added narrow gauge film for educational purposes and for amateurs, a field growing in importance.

American production in Germany was practically nil, its efforts for the most part being confined to dubbing.

Distribution is usually made on a percentage basis with a minimum guarantee. The average terms are 30 to 35 per cent of gross receipts less compensation tax and no distinction is made between the German and the foreign films. In exceptional cases films are rented at a fixed price, especially to very small cinema owners.

Taxes in Germany

The socalled amusement tax makes up 15 per cent of the entrance fee and is generally absorbed by the film renter. For a film that has been qualified as "valuable from a cultural or political viewpoint," this tax is reduced by the proportion which the qualified film strip bears to the total length of all films shown. As in every performance a qualified culture film has to be shown, the tax is reduced in any case to at least 12 per cent. When the feature film and the news reel are also qualified, the tax is further diminished and may even be entirely eliminated. During the past year the amusement tax averaged 7.5 per cent. For the 1935-36 season, box office receipts were estimated at RM 250,000,000 and the amusement tax at RM 17,000,000. For the preceding year the respective figures were RM 205,000,000 and RM 15,000,000.

5,273 Theatres

According to the latest statistical compilation there were 5,273 film theatres with a total of 1,933,059 seats in Germany at the beginning of the film season 1936-37. Of the 5,273 theatres, 2,227 had a seating capacity of 250 or less; 2,127 theatres a capacity of from 500 to 900, and 194 theatres of more than 900 seats. The capacity of the German film theatres appears to be utilized to only about one-third, in spite of the increase in the number of visitors. The number of persons employed in the film industry is estimated at 51,500, of whom about 29,000 are employed in production, 3,500 in distribution, import and export, and 19,000 in cinemas. The capital invested in German film theatres is estimated at around $180,000,000 or about $93 for every seat.

In 1936 all but two cinemas were fitted with sound film apparatus, while in 1934 there were still 420 theatres without such equipment.

GREECE

Motion picture films had been one of the few items of interest to the United States exempt from quotas and other import restrictions and American films had accounted for fully 75 per cent of total Greek film imports in 1936. An end to this freedom was made by the import regulations which became effective on Jan. 1, 1937.

The new regulations limit film imports to 210 complete pictures every six months; 150 of these are to be pictures suitable for exhibition in first-run houses in Athens and the remaining 60 are to be "action" films (mystery, detective, cowboy) suitable for exhibition in second-run or "popular" theaters charging low admission fees. The 210 feature films will be distributed among established film importers on the basis of their average annual importations from May, 1932, through May, 1936.

News reels and shorts of not more than 350 meters in length are unrestricted and remain on the free list.

An additional burdensome requirement placed on local film exchanges is that in clearing a feature through customs they will be required to file with the authorities a declaration stating the name of the theatre for which the film is intended. This requirement not only eliminates the possibility of importing films and then negotiating the sale of their exhibition rights but also places film importers more or less under the control of the theatre owners, inasmuch as no films may be imported unless previously contracted for.

The new system also affects adversely the business of film exchanges established recently, because of the requirement that average 1932-36 imports are to be used as a basis of allocating the global quota of 210 pictures. Newly established but promising firms on this basis will receive only a small share while older and somewhat moribund importers will be favored.

For films imported from countries such as Germany, which have official clearing arrangements with Greece and a trade balance in favor of the latter, the payment of drafts covering royalties and prints is effected without difficulty. In the case of the United States and England, foreign exchange in settlement of the value of imported films (including royalties) is made available in two ways. On film purchased outright and imported by local exchanges for their own account, payment for prints and distribution rights in foreign currency may be effected either by means of a letter of credit or by sight draft attached to shipping documents and presented through a local bank. In the case of films imported by the local branches of foreign producing or distributing organizations, where the royalties are determined by the proceeds from the exhibition of each individual film, remittances in foreign currency are authorized upon application after the books of the local branch have been audited by the Bank of Greece. Due consideration is given to the working agreements between local branches and their head offices in the matter of royalty payments.

Foreign shippers are required to sign and mail direct to the Invoice Control Commission at the Greek port of destination the original invoice covering each shipment to be cleared through Greek customs.

Censorship is controlled by the Public Morals Division of the Police Department. Regulations provide that children under 16 may not be admitted unless the film shown has been approved by the censors as suitable for children and adults. However, this regulation almost never is strictly enforced. Censorship is particularly rigid on communistic propaganda.

American films control about 70 per cent of the Greek trade. This includes films dubbed or produced in the European studios of American producers.

During the 1933-36 season (October-May) a total of 323 feature films were released in Greece. Of these 232 (72%) were American, 43 (13%) German and 32 (10%) French.

Under the reciprocal copyright protection agreement signed between Greece and the United States on January 27, 1932, American films receive full protection.

In September, 1935, the Greek Government ratified the International Convention on Educational Films whereby customs franchise is extended to films used for instruction.

Production is confined to news and advertising reels. There are no studios.

Taxes on tickets costing up to 8 drachmas are 25 per cent; over 8 drachmas, 30 per cent. (The drachma is about $0.009.)

The import duty on positive films, including all surtaxes, amounts to 87½ drachmas per kilogram or approximately 36c per pound. In addition there is a 1½ per cent turnover tax payable at the time of entry, which is calculated on the basis of (1) the landed cost of prints (including import duty and surtaxes) and (2) the royalty value or distribution rights. For the assessment of the turnover tax the distribution rights have been fixed by ministerial decision at 1,000 gold dollars ($1,690) for features intended for exhibition in first-run houses and at 100 gold dollars ($169) for less expensive films generally exhibited in "popular" or second and third-run houses.

According to a census taken in March, 1936, there were 153 theatres in operation, 140 wired for sound. During the hot summer months all indoor theatres close down for lack of air-conditioning facilities, while at the same time a large number of outdoor theatres are started. The aggregate seating capacity of all the regular theatres is estimated at 70,000. There are nine first-run houses in Athens totaling 13,000 seats, three built in 1936.

GUATEMALA

There is no censorship board acting in Guatemala, although the Chief of Police reserves the right to prohibit the showing of any picture.

Seventy-five to eighty per cent of the films shown in Guatemala are American.

There is no film production in Guatemala.

Fifteen per cent of gross theatre receipts are turned over to the Government for public charities under the Beneficencia Publica.

There are 31 theatres (25 sound-equipped) operating in Guatemala with a seating capacity of 18,000. Admission prices range from ten to fifty cents.

Distributors of American films in Guatemala continue to complain of the competition from Spanish speaking pictures. It is reported that American films are being pushed slowly out of all of the smaller towns, now that Mexican pictures are becoming more available, and that one of the three first class theatres of Guatemala City is showing about 65 per cent Spanish speaking pictures. The smaller are showing all the Spanish speaking pictures obtainable. The first class theatre now showing 65 per cent Spanish speaking pictures has purchased 65 Spanish films for 1937, twenty of which are said to be of Argentine production and the balance Mexican.

HAITI

According to the censorship law of July 12, 1935, those pictures which are found to be inadmissible to children less than 18 years of age must be so advertised on the motion picture billboard. The Department of Interior is given the power to censor films considered immoral or dangerous to the maintenance of internal order. Anyone who does not comply with the regulations laid down is subject to a fine of from $100 to $500.

Forty per cent of product shown is American; 60 per cent French. French pictures have gained immensely in this market. In value, the proportion is about 20% American, 80% French. There is no objection to dubbed films if they are in French.

Copyright protection is not available in Haiti.

There never has been any production in Haiti.

A tax of 10 per cent is imposed on theatre admissions.

The eight theatres have an admission price range of 10 to 60 cents. Six of the theatres have sound apparatus.

Melodramas are preferred, but musical comedies are also well received. American "slapstick" comedy is neither understood nor appreciated.

HONDURAS

Executive Resolution No. 1960 of March 29, 1928, provides that the Governor of each Department of the Republic shall have a board of censors to operate in his jurisdiction. The regulation is closely followed in most districts.

Fifteen per cent of the motion pictures exhibited are Mexican and European and the remainder American.

Copyright relations are according to the Inter-American Copyright Conventions, Mexico City and Buenos Aires, Jan. 2, 1902, and Aug. 11, 1910. Ratified July 13, 1914, and April 9, 1914.

No pictures are made in Honduras.

Municipal taxes vary from 5 to 10 lempiras per day whether the theatre has one or more performances.

INDIA

The failure which met the Indian section of the Calcutta Press in its agitation against construction of the Metro theatre in that city did not daunt the spirits of the Motion Picture Society of India, Bombay, a body representing the indigenous industry. As soon as the news of the projected construction of another Metro theatre in Bombay reached their ears, the members staged an even stronger campaign of agitation, but the Government had taken its stand that they could not interfere with fair and legitimate trade competition.

In the year several representations were made to the Board of Film Censors, as a result of which the foreign film industry was not only able to get from the Board assurances of cooperation but definite concessions in the way of preservation of cuts made in a film for a period of two years before destruction, and reduction of charges for advertising trailers to Rs. 3 instead of Rs. 5. Cuts were made in 19 films examined by the Bengal Board in the year ended March 31, 1936.

In that period 1,198 films representing 3,362,022 feet were certified by the Bengal Board, representing 641 films with 1,528,085 feet American; 408 films and 688,880 feet British; 8 foreign with 10,055 feet, and 141 Indian films measuring 1,135,022 feet.

The bill to amend the Cinematograph Act to include the censorship of cinema posters was still before the Government.

About 73 per cent, by footage, of the imported pictures were American. This figure is an estimate as inaccuracies are found in import statistics due to reimportation of American films from Ceylon. The distribution arrangements for British pictures continued to improve and British pictures accounted for 24 per cent.

25 Major Producers

There is no organization, official or private, which assembles data relative to the production of Indian films. According to the trade, there are in India 25 major India producing companies. There are also 40 to 50 small producing concerns which may exist today and discontinue operations on the morrow. It is estimated that there also are at least 70 motion picture producing concerns in South India alone and that this number is increasing rapidly.

It is the general impression of the public that the quality of Indian films is steadily improving. Several produced and exhibited during the past year, despite the local language difficulty, attracted the discerning attention of Europeans in India.

During the period January to October, 1936, a total of 396 Indian pictures with a total footage of 2,627,334 feet were examined by the Bombay and Calcutta boards. During the same period of 1935 a total of 346 Indian pictures with a total footage of $3,101,314 were examined. Most were in sound.

Customs Duty Increases

During the year under review, the Government of India withdrew the drawback of 7/8th per cent customs duty which the foreign film industry had considered the fair and reasonable privilege. The Kinematograph Renters Society made representations to the Government, supported by statistics, appealing for reconsideration of their decision, but to no avail. This action on the part of the Government, which the Motion Picture Society calls directly due to their initiative, is regarded as an additional imposition placed on the distribution of foreign films, including the existing excessive tariffs.

The present rate continues to be seven annas per foot on foreign exposed films.

The foreign film industry submitted a second petition to the Government seeking at least a small measure of relief from the existing excessive tariffs.

There are 670 theatres now operating in India, 600 equipped for sound, 150 showing exclusively American, British and Continental pictures, 120 showing mixed foreign and Indian films and the remaining 330 showing exclusively Indian films.

JAMAICA

Films are censored in Kingston for showing in the whole Island under Jamaica Law 14 of 1913, Jamaica Law 13 of 1925 and Jamaica Law 21 of 1926. About 3 per cent of the pictures submitted are rejected each year. Pictures showing drunkenness or unconventional frivolity on the part of whites will not pass the censor. This is because of the large Negro population. Pictures showing robberies and holdups are banned.

From 75 to 85 per cent of films shown come from the United States, the remaining 15 to 25 per cent from England.

There is no production in Jamaica.

General property taxes and income taxes are imposed on theatres. There are no taxes on admissions.

LATVIA

The Latvian Government's project to establish a film import monopoly was not abandoned. The production of sound films in the Lettish language has been increasing, and the product is made wholly in Latvia. The Latvian authorities appear determined to develop such production.

By special instructions issued by the Latvian Film Censoring Board all texts, advertisements and other printed matter must be in the Lettish language only, instead of Lettish, German and Russian, as formerly. No foreign language is permitted except in sound. This places American films at a disadvantage since the local population does not generally understand English, and certain sections of the population do not understand Lettish and used to depend on the printed accompanying text, each racial subdivision of the population reading its own language.

The percentage of American films imported into Latvia in 1935 amounted to 43.3 per cent of total imports.

The Latvian Government adheres to the Berne Convention of 1886, revised in Rome in 1928, and effective in Latvia May 15, 1937.

Production types compared as follows in total imports for 1935:

Type	No. of Films	Length in Meters
Melodramas	1	2,150
Comedies	1	159
Newsreels, Landscapes	77	14,681
Scientific	1	1,530
Educational	11	7,638
Advertising	21	1,092
Total	112	27,250

The turnover tax payable, for tickets up to Lats 1.20 is 25 per cent; tickets sold for 1.21 to 2.00 Lats, 30 per cent. When programs consist exclusively of educational films, the tax levied is 15 per cent of the admission price. The tax levied on tickets in provincial theatres averages 20 per cent of the cost of tickets, which for educational films is reduced to 15 per cent. Importers of films pay a special tax of 0.15 Lats per meter for the benefit of the Culture Fund.

There are 98 theatres in Latvia, of which 37 are in Riga. All are equipped for sound.

LITHUANIA

There are no Quota or Kontingent laws.

Regulations governing the importation of cinema films into Lithuania were promulgated on Nov. 19, 1932, retroactive to Sept. 1, 1932, by the Minister of Finance, in agreement with the Minister of the Interior, on the basis of Paragraph 103 (1) of the Customs Statutes, as amended on Sept. 1, 1932, and contain the following provisions:

After the Kaunas customhouse has inspected the film and received the assessed customs duty as a deposit from the owner, or the forwarding agent, it shall submit it to the film censor for inspection. Cinema films shall be submitted to the censor sealed. Films prohibited demonstration by the censor shall be returned to the Kaunas customhouse sealed; shall be re-exported and the deposit made by the film owner shall be returned to him.

By an extension of the Lithuanian import license system effective Feb. 15, 1936, cinema films were included in the list of products for the import of which a license is required.

According to an amendment of the censorship law, effective April 15, 1935, permits must be procured for the exportation of films produced in Lithuania. The same amendment also provides that for the production of newsreels in Lithuania a permit has to be obtained from the Ministry of Interior.

On Dec. 22, 1934, the Minister of the Interior issued instructions for the censorship of films on the basis of Article 10 of the Censorship Law of Sept. 1, 1932, the most important provisions of which are:

In order to obtain a license, a petition must be submitted to the Film Censor.

All subtitles and texts written in a foreign language must be removed from the film before it is censored, and, where necessary, replaced by Lithuanian subtitles and texts.

Subtitles on films or slides must correspond with the context.

Films imported from abroad must be censored not later than 15 days after they are released by the customs authorities, or be liable to confiscation by the censor, and to re-exportation at the owner's expense.

The number of films prohibited demonstration in 1935 was 12, of which 4 were of American production, 3 of Soviet production, 3 of German origin and 2 of French origin.

In the first seven months of 1936 a total of 434 films, having a length of 504,693 meters, were censored. Of this number 204 films, having a length of 237,383 meters, were of American production; 117 films, with a total length of 170,443 meters, of German production; 31 films, with a total of 95,191 meters, of Austrian production; 25 films, with a total of 4,364 meters of Lithuanian production.

According to a reliable individual in Lithuania, as well as officials of the Film Censoring Section of the Ministry of Interior, approximately 50 per cent of films exhibited in Lithuania in 1933 were of American origin, followed by German (about 35 per cent), French, Soviet Russian, Czechoslovak and Polish films. About 50 per cent of American films were dubbed in the German language.

Approximately 60 per cent of films exhibited in Lithuania in 1935 were of American origin. In the first eight months of 1936 approximately 60 per cent prohibited were of American origin.

A monopoly for the production of newsreels in Lithuania for a period of 5 years was granted in April, 1935, to Jurgis Lanartas, who later established the firm Musu Lietuva (Our Lithuania). This company is producing principally newsreels depicting Lithuanian life, but of a very poor quality. During the first 10 months of 1936 Musa Lietuva produced 78 newsreels. It purchased equipment for the taking of sound-on-film newsreels.

The current amusement tax law became effective Aug. 1, 1932, and taxes on admissions are: on tickets up to Lit 1.00, 20 per cent; from Lits 1.00 to Lits 2.00, 30 per cent; over Lits 2.00, 40 per cent.

Of the 64 theatres, 44 are wired for sound.

According to unofficial information, the average gross receipts of the four principal theatres in Kaunas, the capital of Lithuania, in 1935, were Lits 500,000, compared to Lits 400,000 in 1934. Net receipts average about 25 per cent less than gross.

Owners of the larger theatres in Kaunas receive films either on a rental or percentage basis or both. The net profit usually varies between 30 and 50 per cent of the net receipts.

In conformity with the Cinema Law, effective Sept. 1, 1932, films of Lithuaian life are required to be shown daily. The usual program order in local theatres is advertising of local commercial and industrial institutions, local newsreels of 120 to 150 meters, foreign (usually American) weekly newsreels 300 to 350 meters, a comedy or scenic film of 150 to 300 meters and then the feature.

NETHERLANDS

A most important development in September, 1936, was the action taken by the Netherland Government to depreciate (in terms of dollars) the value of the guilder. Prior to Sept. 26, 1936, the exchange value of the dollar in the Netherlands had been stable for some time at about Fl. 1.48. Since the change exchange rates have fluctated considerably and there is no assurance that the current rate will be maintained. In October, 1936, the local exchange value of the dollar was slightly above Fl. 1.85. The exchange value of the dollar appreciated approximately 37 guilder cents or about 25 per cent during October.

There can be no immediate increase in the guilder rentals or royalties on American films exhibited in the Netherlands so that American producers must accept a loss in dollar returns from the local exhibitions of their films; they accepted an increase in dollar returns when the depreciation of the dollar in 1933 was not accompanied by any decrease in guilder charges locally. The dollar value of some of the fixed charges of distribution in the Netherlands, such as import duties and censorship fees, which are at specific footage rates, will be reduced.

Censorship is quite strict. Under the law of May 14, 1926, (S. 118), power is vested in a Central Commission of sixty members at the Hague, from which reviewing boards are appointed. Films are placed in one of three classes: (1) "long" (feature) films; (2) "cultural" and "scientific" films, usually short, but feature films occasionally are so classified; (3) "short" films, including newsreels. Each film is given one of four ratings: (a) suitable for all ages; (b) not to be shown to children under fourteen years of age; (c) not to be shown to persons under eighteen years of age; (d) not to be exhibited. The censorship fees are Fl. 0.035 per meter for features and Fl. 0.001 per meter for cultural and scientific films.

A Catholic censorship must review and pass all films rated "C" by the National Board before they may be exhibited in 28 municipalities of the provinces Limburg and North Brabant. There is no fee for this censorship.

Any mayor may forbid the showing of any film in his community; that action is rare. The City of Nijmegen requires approval by a local censorship board; no censorship fee is charged.

During the first ten months of 1936 the National Board passed, "A," "B," or "C," 389 long feature films compared with 344 in the corresponding period of the previous year. During the 1936 period 27 features were proscribed, 10 passing subsequent reviews. In the 1936 period 16 features had been proscribed without passing subsequent reviews.

Films are barred which are believed apt to incite disorder or immorality or to have objectionable political content. American gangster pictures usually are rejected.

In recent years the dominant position of American features has improved, while German films have declined in popularity; there is no serious competition from Netherland producers. The following table gives the nationality of the long feature, or cultural, films passed by the censors' board:

	January 1 to October 31

Netherlands is a member of the Berne Convention. Present copyright laws are dated Sept. 23, 1912. Copyright continues, with some exceptions, 50 years after author's death.

Only two studios, Barnstijn at Wassenaar and Cinetone at Amsterdam, are used for regular production. There are no producers working on regular schedules; nine producing companies are listed, but some of them have not produced a picture in the past year. Nine Netherland features were released in the first ten months of 1936.

Import duties are fixed at Fl. 0.04 per meter, to which must be added a compensatory duty of 1% and a sales tax of 4%.

Amusement taxes vary with municipalities, but are generally "reasonable."

It is customary for American films to be released in the Netherlands for first-runs on a percentage basis, usually 25 per cent of the net profit. American films usually are released for second-runs on a straight guilder rental.

Of the 305 theatres, all but a few operated regularly. On Oct. 31, 1936, there were 297 wired for sound; 90 installations for sound on film and 207 installations for film and disc.

NETHERLAND INDIA

American pictures are popular and the official attitude towards them is favorable.

Censorship remains strict on all subjects involving racial or religious differences, strikes or labor unrest, mob disorders, violence and cruelty. Censorship from the point of view of sex is as strict as ever, but American films are now encountering little difficulty on that score. The number of American films banned is steadily decreasing, the percentage of American films rejected for showing having been 12% in 1933, 10% in 1934, 5% in 1935 and 4.8% in the first half of 1936. In 1936, up to October 31, thirteen American features had been banned.

American films made up 68% of all films reviewed by the Censorship Commission in the first half of 1936, as against 64% in 1935, indicating an increasingly dominant position. German and Dutch films lost ground, making up respectively 8.4% and 4% of the total for the first half of 1936. British films showed a slight gain, accounting for 4.8%, while the remaining 15% was divided among the products of 10 different countries.

The outlook for American films appears to be good, and the decreasing popularity of German films is diminishing their local importance as the chief competitors.

Copyright laws of the Netherlands apply.

Despite the formation of a new company to produce films, chiefly travelogues and short subjects, local production remains negligible and it is highly unlikely that it will obtain more than 5% of the local market for 1937.

During the first half of last year 16,170 meters of locally produced film were reported as having been reviewed, of which 7,112 meters were silent.

Taxes remain high and include an import duty of 15 guilder cents per meter of film. An amusement tax on admissions is levied by cities and towns and averages 22½%.

There were 143 theatres estimated to be regularly open for daily performances, and 55 others for occasional shows; 172 were sound-equipped, at least 10% these closed for several years.

Many "theatres" in the rural districts are little more than barns, sound equipment being moved from one building to another. Some estimates place the number of buildings available and suitable for motion picture exhibition as high as 250.

NETHERLAND WEST INDIES

Under block booking there have been protests against many films as unsuitable because of subjects which deal with Negro life to the disparagement of the white race, or vice versa, or because of dealing with a subject of no possible interest to local people.

It is now possible for the socalled Board of Censors to require the cutting out of any part or parts of a film, or to refuse permission for the film to be shown, if objectionable, with especial attention being paid to pictures depicting class strife, political activties and morals. Whether a picture is suitable for both minors and adults continues to be of especial interest to the censors.

American films accounted for fully 95 per cent of all films shown. Newsreels from the Netherlands and British films offered the principal competition.

Copyright laws of the Netherlands apply to the Netherland West Indies. If a film is copyrighted in the Netherlands, it is protected in the Netherland West Indies by virtue of such copyright.

There is no production of films, and no taxes are imposed upon theatres or admissions.

There are six theatres, all wired, an increase of one from the last report, but this theatre (Theater Brion), in Curacao, is not employed continuously as a moving picture house. Price of admission are (current rate of exchange = 1.85 florins to the dollar) $0.13 to $0.65.

NEW ZEALAND

(Also see special article by Cliff Holt, Almanac correspondent in Melbourne.)

Under the powers conferred by the Board of Trade Act, the New Zealand Film Licensing Board decreed that all future applications for exhibitors' licenses will be carefully considered and that no license will be renewed if it is decided that either (a) undue hardship would result to the community, or (b) unreasonable economic waste would result. A feeling persists among distributors and in the community generally that New Zealand is already over-supplied with theatre facilities.

During the year ended March 31, 1936, a total of 2,060 films of all classes, of a total length of 5,142,240 feet, were examined by the censors. Eleven (8 American) were rejected, 91 were passed after cutting, and 155 were recommended as more suitable for adult audiences than for children. The figures compare with those of the year previous: 28 rejected, 140 cut, and 227 recommended for adults.

British quota films totaled 107, with a length of 767,620 feet, and non-quota films 374, of 384,520 feet. Foreign quota films totaled 376, with a length of 2,750,550 feet, and non-quota films 1,203, with a length of 1,239,550 feet. The grand total consisted of 483 quota films with a length of 3,518,170 feet, and 1,577 non-quota films, of a total length of 1,624,070 feet. The total of non-quota films decreased by 113, while there were two fewer quota films shown. The countries of origin of the quota films were as follows: United States, 373 (an increase of 19); Great Britain, 104 (a decrease of 9); Australia, 1; New Zealand, 2; Germany, 1; Spain, 1; Italy, 1.

The Copyright Act of 1909, by proclamation Feb. 9, 1917, was extended May 25, 1922. A fee of 1d. per New Zealand £1 of theatre revenues is paid by New Zealand exhibitors to the local representatives of the Australian Authors Rights Protective Association. Those exhibitors who are members of the New Zealand Motion Picture Exhibitors Association are given a 20 per cent rebate.

A total of 86,026 feet of film, valued at New Zealand £1,927, was produced in New Zealand and exported therefrom in the calendar year 1935. Three films produced and exhibited in New Zealand were "Phar Lap's Son," "The Friendly Road," and "Romantic New Zealand." The last-named film was produced by the New Zealand Tourist and Publicity Department at a studio which the Government had taken over at Miramar, Wellington. The Government intends to film a series of educational and scenic films of New Zealand during the coming year.

Under the Cinematograph Films Act, 1928, the taxable income derived by any person from the business of renting films shall be deemed to be 12½ per cent of the gross receipts. This became operative as of April 1, 1928. The rate payable is on a sliding scale, the maximum now being 4s. 6d. in the £1 plus 30 per cent. In September, 1930, the Film Hire Tax was passed. Gross receipts from the renting of foreign films, after allowing a deduction of all expenses paid in New Zealand and an amount equal to 12½ per cent of the gross receipts derived from the renting of sound films, were taxed 25 per cent. The rate of British films was 10 per cent. The duty of 1d. per foot, payable on all foreign importations of films, was cancelled as from July 1, 1930. The advantages of this system of taxation were:

(a) It was directly in proportion to the net receipts from and therefore the value of film.

(b) It did not restrict the importation of film in any way.

(c) It was payable only after the monies were received by the renter, and thereby reduced the actual capital required for the operation of the business.

(d) It came into immediate operation and the Government derived revenue from the films already imported which otherwise would have escaped taxation. It is necessary to get a renter's license to operate in New Zealand.

The only change made by the recently enacted legislation in the method of taxation was that fixing 12½ per cent to the gross receipts of renters as an income for taxation purposes. Heretofore, the taxable income was to be not less than 12½ per cent of the gross receipts, and in some cases renters were charged at a higher rate than this percentage.

The total film hire tax for the year ended March 31, 1936, was New Zealand £60,657. Recent increases in film rentals indicate that the total collected for the next fiscal year may exceed New Zealand £70,000.

A total of 410 exhibitors' licenses were issued during the year ended Sept. 30, 1934. In addition, licenses were issued to 35 circuit exhibitors, and to 14 film exchanges. All 410 theatres are wired for sound.

Exhibitors argue that more theatres should be licensed, that in the smaller towns the public is not able to witness many of even the higher quality films due to lack of exhibiting facilities. The distributors argue that even now some of the smaller theatres are unable to earn enough money due to meager attendance.

The New Zealand Licensing Board was understood to have consented that two technical advisors, one from the distributors and one from the exhibitors, shall assist it in passing on future applications for theatre licenses.

NICARAGUA

There are no quota or contingent laws, inimical to the interests of American films.

Censorship is not strict. Few films are cut and then principally for moral reasons.

Ninety-five per cent of films shown are American, the remainder from Mexico, Germany, and Great Britain.

The Inter-American Copyright, Convention, Mexico City and Buenos Aires, Jan. 27, 1902 and Aug. 11, 1910, was modified by the Havana agreement of Feb. 18, 1928.

There is no film production in Nicaragua.

Taxes are high. Theatres pay local taxes and import duty.

The 25 theatres, all wired, seat 20,000.

The average range of admission prices is from 10 to 50 centavos, while the average program consists of one feature, one comedy, and one newsreel. Programs are changed daily. The lower classes appear to like "Wild West" pictures, while the better educated classes prefer melodrama.

American stars are decidedly preferred. There is a very pronounced objection to American stars with native language dubbed in. Spanish dialogue is preferred.

NORWAY

The government gives no aid to Norwegian film producers. It has become the policy to organize a new company when a film is to be made, thus obtaining the necessary capital. Because of the difficulty in raising the funds needed, and due to the small amount allowed for each picture (approximately Kr. 100,000 in comparison with Swedish films costing from Kr. 150,000 to Kr. 200,000) a Norwegian picture has little, if any, chance of becoming wholly satisfactory. The studio built at Jar, outside of Oslo, has not provided the desired incentive, and although there is still a certain amount of agitation for governmental assistance, the Norwegian public itself seems to have lost interest. This is evidently due to the lack of enthusiasm over new Norwegian releases, no doubt caused by the low standard of films produced in this country.

The censorship plan has remained unchanged except for increased efforts to restrict the showing of gunplay and gangster films.

American films are very popular in Norway. There is, and always will be, a certain amount of criticism with regard to American pictures, many of them being so entirely foreign to the Norwegian trend of thought. However, there is no doubt that American films are preferred, even though European pictures perhaps are more readily understood. In 1935 there were released in Oslo 269 films, of which 169 were American, 41 German, 18 Swedish, and 16 British.

In the first half of 1936 there were released in Oslo 131 films, an increase of 17 over the last half of 1935. American films numbered 85, or 65% of the total, and German 13, or 10%. As compared with the first half of 1935, there was an increase of 4% in the number of American films shown, and a decrease of 7% in German pictures.

The improved economic condition of Norway is reflected in the attendance and box office receipts of Oslo, the capital. There has been a steady increase in both for each six month period.

Copyright relations, with legal rights and restrictions, are specified in the royal decree of July 1, 1905, as amended by the decrees of April 9, 1910 and June 14, 1911.

"Morderen Uten Ahsikt" (The Murderer Without a Face) was released in 1936. A/S Merkur Film was organized to produce this film, and possibly more.

Ten per cent of the gross receipts are collected as tax. Films of Norwegian production are taxed 5 per cent.

There are 240 motion picture theatres in Norway, all wired. It is expected, however, that this number will gradually increase as the popularity of neighborhood theatres becomes more apparent. This is, of course, particularly true in the suburbs of Oslo. In the past year a few districts near Oslo built small motion picture theatres, most popular with the younger generation. As in the United States, these houses usually show second-run pictures.

The rental of first-run foreign films remains at 30% of the gross receipts and films produced in this country at 40%. Second-run foreign films are rented at 28% of the gross receipts and Norwegian at 33%, as heretofore.

PALESTINE

Censorship is very strict. The Central Censorship Board, appointed by the High Commissioner, consists of nine members, including the District Commissioner, Jerusalem District, as chairman; representatives of the Inspector General of Police and Prisons, of the Director of Education and of the Chamber of Commerce; the Assistant District Commissioner, Jerusalem District; an assistant secretary from the Chief Secretary's Office, and the Government Welfare Inspector.

No film may be exhibited without first obtaining the required governmental authorization. The fees, prescribed by regulation, are:

For news films or advertisements, LP. 0.100 each.

For other films, LP. 1.000 each.

A fee is prescribed of LP. .0.250 payable to each member for each film reviewed. This fee, however, is paid by the Government itself.

The rate of exchange as of Dec. 12, 1936: $4.90 Palestine pound is the same as the pound sterling of Great Britain.

Product shown is American, Austrian, English, Russian, Czechoslovakian, French, Polish, Egyptian and domestic.

Three Jewish companies include one producing newsreels with text in Hebrew and English, two producing sound pictures in Hebrew.

The Government fees for the issuance of a license to operate theatre or cinema are as follows:

Annual licenses: 1 to 100 seats—LP. 10; 101 to 200 seats—LP. 20; over 200 seats—LP. 30.

Occasional license: All classes—LP. 0.500 per day.

The Government imposes a revenue tax on all theatre and cinema tickets, varying according to the price of the ticket, as follows: 50 to 99 mils, 5 mils; 100 to 200 mils, 10; 200 to 500 mils, 20; 500 to 1,000 mils, 30; 1,000 and up, 50.

The city of Tel Aviv is the only municipality in Palestine imposing a municipal tax on theatre or cinema tickets. This tax (which is in addition to the Government tax) also varies according to the price of the tickets, as follows:

Tickets costing 1 to 50 mils, 2 mils; 50 to 85, 4; 85 to 125, 8; 125 to 150, 16; 150 to 200, 24; 200 to 250, 34; 250 to 450, 50; 450 to 1,000, 100 mils.

The 28 theatres (one in Trans-Jordan), all are equipped for sound. (One in Trans-Jordan).

PANAMA

Panama has no contingent laws.

The Administrative Code, Article 1221 through 1237, regulates public performances, but there is no mention of censoring motion picture films nor is there any federal censorship committee. In practice, the Censorship Committee for the City of Panama more or less acts for the entire Republic. As a rule, if the Panama City authorities pass a picture it is accepted in the rest of the country. Municipal Law No. 38 of 1928 provides for creation of a censorship committee.

The Canal Zone does not have a Censorship Committee. Every picture permitted to be exhibited in the United States is shown in the Canal Zone. Both the Army and Canal Zone theatres have a clause in their contract whereby they may eliminate certain parts of any film if deemed advisable. Panama, like all other Latin American countries, is extremely sensitive about any picture or newsreel that may be considered to discredit her national honor.

American films are in the greatest demand. An occasional German, Mexican and English film is exhibited, and the better type ones are fairly well received. Spanish pictures made in Spain and Argentine pictures have found favor.

All copyrights are paid for in the United States before entering Panama.

There are no producing companies.

The only federal tax on motion pictures is assessed against tickets. Tickets that cost up to 20 cents pay a tax of ½ cent. Those that cost up to 40 cents pay 1 cent. Tickets that cost up to 60 cents pay 2 cents, all in excess of 60 cents, five cents each.

Motion pictures produced in a foreign language, and where titles are not superimposed in Spanish, pay double this rate.

Theatres pay a municipal license tax which varies according to the city, classification of theatre, gross income. For example, in Panama City the municipal tax is divided into five categories. First class houses pay a monthly license tax of $175; second class, $150; third class, $100; fourth class, $50; fifth class, $40, and sixth class, $30.

Theatres

The Republic of Panama has 23 theatres, all wired. The Canal Zone (including Bureau of Playgrounds, Army, Navy, and YMCA) 24, all sound equipped. Operated by Bureau of Clubs and Playgrounds, 10; Army, 10; Navy, 2; YMCA, 2.

The average program consists of one feature of 7 to 8 reels, one single reel news, one 2-reel or two 1-reel comedies or a travel or educational short. Programs for first-run houses in the Republic of Panama consist of approximately 9 reels. There is usually one 7-reel feature and one-reel or two single-reel shorts.

In the Republic of Panama programs are changed four times each week. The Army theatres in the Canal Zone change seven times each week or once every day. The Bureau of Clubs and Playgrounds change programs six times each week. The drawing capacity is quite limited, which explains why programs are changed so often, particularly in the Canal Zone. In the first-run houses in Colon and Panama City an exceptionally good picture will draw a full house for two and sometimes three days, but in the Canal Zone attendance is always less the second day regardless of the success of the picture.

Admission prices vary considerably. Army theatres charge only 15 cents, except for civilian Government employees, who pay 25 cents. Theatres operated by the Bureau of Clubs and Playgrounds charge 40 cents admission when featuring first-run pictures, on other occasions 30 cents. First-run houses in Panama City and Colon, for week day matinees from 1:00 to 3:00 p. m., charge 15 cents for children and 30 cents for adults; after 3:00 p. m. 20 and 40 cents; on Sundays and holidays from 1:00 to 3:00 p. m., 20 and 30 cents; third-class theatres charge from 10 to 15 cents.

The Panamanian market is decidedly in favor of American films made in the English language. The Canal Zone represents approximately 50 per cent of the market for films. The public objects to American made films with Spanish dubbed in. Practically every educated Panamanian reads and writes and understands the English language almost as well as an American or Englishman.

The public likes any type of picture that goes over well in the United States. The same situation is true in the Canal Zone. Newsreels are exceptionally popular in the Canal Zone. The Army and Bureau of Clubs and Playgrounds theatres receive newsreels about seven or eight days after they are released in New York.

In the interior films made in the Spanish language are fairly popular, principally because many of the laborers are unable to read and write, but the Interior is a very small part of the market.

PARAGUAY

There is no quota or contingent.

There are no censorship laws, but the municipality takes the right to refuse censorship. It is very seldom that the municipality requests to see a picture.

Ninety-five per cent of pictures shown are American.

There is no production of films.

Taxes are moderate. There is a city tax of 1 peso (5/12 of one United States cent) on each admission. There is also a tax imposed on theatres to receive their license.

There are six theatres in Paraguay, all sound-equipped.

The average program consists of one feature and one or two short subjects, such as newsreels or comedies. Musical comedies are the favorite type of picture. Almost any kind is accepted, with one exception, melodramas. There is too much of the serious in the real life in Paraguay. American stars are preferred without a doubt and the language has very little importance. Very few Paraguayans speak other than Spanish, but as long as the sub-titles are used there is no objection. Nor is there objection to American stars with native language dubbed in.

PERU

Complaints by importers of films and cinema owners regarding unjust censorship and other irregularities in film legisation in Peru resulted in a decree dated Dec. 27, 1935, supplementing and modifying former ones on this subject. This decree, in turn, were supplemented by Decrees of Jan. 9, 1936, and Feb. 19, 1936.

All films (features, shorts and trailers) must be introduced through Callao Custom House and film entering through other ports will be forwarded to the Callao Custom House for clearance. Fifty per cent of duties paid will be refunded on pictures rejected by the Board of Censors.

Exhibition of films is not to be allowed unless they have first been approved by an individual censor, a special censorship body called Patronato Nacional de Censura and by the Minister of Justice in cases where it may be so decided. This censorship body is composed of the youngest district attorney of the Lima Superior Court of Justice, as chairman, the Director of Education and three officials representing the Departments of Government and Police, Foreign Affairs, Labor and Social Prevision, a member of the Provincial Council of Lima appointed by the Council, and the Municipal Inspector of Shows. All these officials serve ad honorem. The Treasurer of this body also acts as secretary and submits his accounts monthly to the Department of Justice who in turn passes them on to the Government for approval.

The Film Censorship Office depends directly from the Director of the Department of Justice, and has its own staff. The Patronato depends from the Minister.

Censorship duties at the rate of 3 centavos per meter are collected on sound films and 20 soles for films not exceeding 500 meters in length. These charges have been in effect since 1930. Silent films pay two centavos per meter and ten soles for films under 500 meters.

Other articles of the decrees cited regulating the censorship of films, provide that shows be classified as follows: Proper for adults (dultos); young women (senoritas) and children (menores). The term "menores" is used to designate children under 18 years; "senoritas" for young women of more than 18 years and "adultos" for men above 18 years.

Children under 18 years shall not be admitted to shows considered improper. One classification is "Not Recommended for Girls." Another classification is "Appropriate for boys and girls over 15 years." These last two classifications are contained in the Supreme Decree of Feb. 19, 1936.

In shows approved for minors it is prohibited to show pictures or trailers not previously qualified as suitable for minors.

Boys and girls under 18 years will not be admitted to any show approved only for adults even though accompanied by their parents.

Penalties for infringement range from 20 to 1,000 soles, according to the gravity of the offense and the recommendation of police entrusted with enforcement. Outside of Lima censorship is exercised by Municipal Councils. Members of censorship committees have free entry to all cinematographic shows.

A Ministerial Resolution dated January 3, 1936, stated that the special function of Peruvian censorship is to scrutinize the morality of cinematographic shows throughout the Republic, prohibit exhibition of immoral, anti-nationalistic and other pictures which may incite crime or delinquency or which may injure the dignity of foregn countries.

The Board will study all applications for reconsideration from film agents and exhibitors when these are not satisfied with the censors' decision.

Applications requesting action of the Board shall be sent with the film to be reviewed one week in advance. Newsreels, animated cartoons, and instructive films receive priority, that is, they do not have to be forwarded in advance or taken in turn.

In 1935, ninety per cent of pictures shown were American. Now the percentage is 70 per cent American in playing time and 80 per cent of pictures exhibited. Dominance of the Peruvian cinema market by American productions is said to be threatened by Mexican, Argentinian and European films. "Help Me to Live" (Ayudama a Vivir), an Argentinian feature exhibited in second and third-run theatres of the capital district is said to have grossed over $4,000 in three days, exceeding returns for the same period on several leading American features advertised in the best manner possible.

American pictures are losing ground daily. Most Peruvians prefer pictures in their own tongue and the Mexican and Argentinian pictures, as poorly executed as they are, "reach the soul" (llegan al alma), as the expression goes, of the bulk of the population in both language and plot, whereas Spanish pictures featuring Mojica, produced in the United States, are really American type melodramas.

Copyright relations, inter-American, are governed by the convention at Buenos Aires, Aug. 11, 1910, ratified July13, 1914.

One film was produced in the past year.

Taxes consist of a municipal license tax; duty on film, ten per cent of admission tickets, and a censorship tax of 3 centavos per meter on sound films, 20 soles for films not over 500 meters in length.

Of the 200 theatres in Peru, all but 20 are wired but include 15 portable equipments. Total seating capacity is 100,000. 65 theatres operate in the Lima-Callao district; there were 57 in 1935. Only 10 are closed. Six new theatres were built last year.

PHILIPPINE ISLANDS

A municipal ordinance prohibiting first-run theatres from selling standing room was declared unconstitutional and is no longer effective. The city of Manila passed an ordinance covering storage of films, requiring that vaults containing motion pictures must be supported by masonry or steel of sufficient strength to carry the load safely, and that beams shall rest at both ends on steel girders, iron or steel columns, or wall or piers of masonry. The supports shall not be used for foundation walls, nor for walls of other than the top vault where vaults are superimposed.

Film companies maintained that this was not necessary and that it would require putting up new buildings. So far, it has not been strictly interpreted.

The Philippine Board of Censors reviewed 1,976 films in 1935 with an aggregate length of 5,588,082 feet. In 1934, only 1,909 films were reviewed but the footage was 5,754,268 feet. Of the films reviwed in 1935, 1,820 were American; 23 Filipino; 48 Chinese; 18 Japanese; 3 British; 7 Spanish and 3 from New Zealand. No film was entirely disapproved. 1,972 were approved without any cutting and the remaining 4 were cut 1,377 feet.

American pictures were 92% of the total shown. United States copyright relations obtain.

Fifteen features were projected in Tagalog in 1936, one with color for world distribution, also a few short subjects.

Municipal taxes on theatres vary, the highest being P1,800 per year for a license for a first-run theatre in Manila. A bill passed called for a five per cent tax on admissions over 40 centavos.

Of the 211 theatres in the Philippine Islands, 148 were wired for sound.

PORTUGAL

There has been no special legislation since last year, when local producers obtained from the Government exemption from customs duty on all imports of machinery, apparatus and material for the industry until June 4, 1937.

Censorship, exercised in Portugal by the "Inspeccao dos Espectaculos," Ministry of the Interior, has caused distributors little difficulty. However, due to the militant antagonism of the Government toward communism, and to the conservative Catholicism of most of the people, films considered of a communistic or anti-religious nature are very apt to meet with disapproval.

American films continued to dominate the local market and again accounted for more than 50 per cent of the total distribution. Other leading suppliers were France, Great Britain and Germany.

Copyright relations are under Governmental Proclamation of July 20, 1893.

In 1936, two ten-reel sound feature films were completed by Portuguese companies, and production was begun on two others, for completion in 1937. "O Trevo das Quatro Folhas" (The Four Leaf Clover), produced by Tobis Portuguesa at a cost of approximately 2,200,000 escudos (about $99,000), was released in June and was exhibited for two months at one of the leading theatres in Lisbon, but was understood not to have been a financial success.

The film "Bocage" (concerning the life of a popular Portuguese poet by that name), was released on December 2, and still is being exhibited. The cost of production is estimated to have been 2,500,000 escudos ($102,500), including a Spanish version.

"Cancao da Terra" (The Song of the Earth), produced by Continental Filmes Lda., at an estimated cost of 700,000 escudos, and "Revolucao de Maio" (The May Revolution), produced by the Government Bureau of Propaganda, at an estimated cost of 1,200,000 escudos, had indoor scenes and sound effects taken at the Lumiar Studios of Tobis Portuguesa, the only sound studios in Portugal.

There were no changes in taxation, but the Government still had under consideration the petition of the Portuguese Industrial Association presented in 1935, requesting the use of box office receipts rather than seating capacity as a basis for taxation.

There are 210 theatres, wired for sound, 10 installations having been made in 1936.

PUERTO RICO

There are no censorship laws in Puerto Rico and no laws prohibiting minors from admission.

Ninety-nine per cent of films shown are American.

Taxes are very high. The following taxes are paid by theatres: income, excise tax on posters, insurance for employees, municipal excise tax based on volume of business.

There are 100 theatres on the island of Puerto Rico, 92 wired and 92 open. The combined seating capacity totals 53,694 and the average cost of admission is 15 cents. Programs usually consist of a feature and a short subject. First-run houses change their programs three times a week while others change daily.

The favorite types of picture are the sentimental melodramas and musical comedy films. American stars are preferred and English speaking films with superimposed Spanish titles, and not Spanish dubbed films, are preferred.

RUMANIA

Although there have been certain deviations and alterations in the foreign trade regime adopted by Rumania on Dec. 1, 1935, its general objectives remained the same, namely, expansion of exports, and contraction of imports. There is also an exchange premium, 38% since December, 1935, charged by the National Bank of Rumania on all foreign exchange released for paying commercial debts abroad.

For a time in 1936 films and advertising materials could be imported outside the framework of the import quota system through extraordinary compensation trading (barter) permits, but by a Journal of the Council of Ministers of Nov. 6, 1936 (No. 2,377), such operations were terminated on Feb. 1, 1937.

On the other hand, importing films and advertising materials under the normal quota permit system was somewhat easier during 1936 and local distributors appeared to feel fairly optimistic.

The greatest problem yet unsolved was the transfer of old commercial debts accumulated before 1935 and considered as arrears. Except in the case of countries with payment agreements arrears payments are not permitted to burden current trade. In fact the National Bank appeared to be waiting for a favorable trade balance with the United States before making any effort to liquidate such arrears due there. Some of those old debts were liquidated through the costly and illegal black market but considerable sums were understood to be still awaiting transfer.

Censorship

Control over moving pictures is exercised by the Commission of Control and Censoring of Moving Pictures composed of 16 members nominated by the Ministry of the Interior and appointed by Royal Decree for four years. A new regulation entered into force on April 30, 1936, (Royal Decree No. 971 of April 27, 1936). The principal change was the transfer of control to the Ministry of the Interior, Office of Radiophonic and Cinematographic Emissions. On October 14, 1936, through Royal Decree No. 2233, motion picture control was transferred again, this time to the National Tourist Office, another dependency of the Ministry of Interior.

Films submitted for censorship are divided into three categories:

(a) diverting films—those which tend to amuse the public with subjects taken from novels, stories, plays, special cinematographic scenes, with contents which neither have the faults enumerated for injurious films nor contain in their entirety the qualities indispensable for classification as educational films;

(b) educational films, including historical films, geographical pictures, films popularizing science and technology; films with special educational subjects such as hygiene and prevention of social diseases, social foresight and economy, development of the spirit of sportmanship, expansion of understanding of art, national and international events of general interest; and finally cinematographic scenes which combine artistic execution with a moral and educational background.

"Injurious" films are those which present criminal actions showing the technique of delinquency and the school of crime, political actions against public and social order, actions which may conceal propaganda, episodes which may hurt the honor of the country or give offence to other nations, subjects critical of authority or of the fundamental institutions, any scenes of a nature to injure the morals of society and the standing discipline of the family, scenes of brutality, pretended historical films, the contents of which are evidently exaggerated.

The Minister of the Interior, or the Under Secretary of State or Secretary General of this Department acting for him, is not permitted to issue exhibition permits for films refused authorization by the Board of Censors. Title, texts, posters, and programs also are carefully censored. The title and the written texts, as well as advertising posters and the printed programs, must be in the Rumanian language. This eliminates the use of Hungarian or German subtitles and superimposed titles on American films. Children under 16 may attend only educational programs or programs of diverting films specially approved for children.

While the previous regulation required the exhibition of educational films only, prior to 8 p. m. every Sunday and holiday, this provision in fact never was respected because of the shortage of such films and the new regulation omits this requirement but provided that on Sundays only educational films be exhibited prior to 1 p. m.

Local distributors complained against the attitude of the censors towards certain categories of pictures, which, although of an amusing character, always are rejected. Films portraying gangsters, police and historical subjects unfavorable to the monarchical regime are refused authorizations.

Approximately 80 per cent of the films shown are American, the remainder are divided among German, French, British, Austrian and Russian in the order given.

Rumania is a member of International Copyright Union, by Presidential Proclamation on May 14, 1928.

In 1936 there was no local production except for shorts and newsreels issued by the National Tourist Office in a very irregular manner and of no outside interest. Similarly for the 1936-1937 season no production was planned. Rumanian authorities have tried, in the last 10 years, to establish a local film industry but the results have been nil. The Council of Ministers issued a Decree on May 18, 1934 (Monitoral Oficial May 18, 1934) establishing a socalled National Cinematography Fund. The local press and the cinematographic circles have often attacked the establishment and the management of this Fund. Although collections are estimated to have surpassed 70,000,000 lei, no real steps have been taken towards creating a national industry. The annual revenue of this Fund is estimated at some 40,000,000 lei. The fact that on Oct. 14, 1936, the management of this Fund was transferred to the National Tourist Office indicated that the Government had decided that the fund could be used by the Tourist Office for foreign propaganda work to better advantage.

Exhibition Taxes

Laws passed by the Parliament for establishing the Cinematography Fund provide a tax of 10 lei per meter for film passed by the Censor; 1 leu on each ticket and 2.40 lei per meter on films presented for censorship to cover the administrative expenses of the Board of Censors. Besides these taxs there is a tax of 1 leu for the Municipality and 2 lei for the Aviation Fund collected on each admission. These taxes are looked on with great hostility by local importers and distributors.

The taxes and expenses which have to be paid by exhibitors are: 25 per cent of the gross receipts to the State, 25 to 40 per cent for film rentals, 10-12 per cent for publicity and administrative expenses, 1 leu from each admission for the National Cinematography Fund, 2 lei from each ticket for aviation and 1 leu per ticket for the municipality. In addition, a tax varying from 200 to 6,000 lei per month must be paid for musical rights to the Rumanian Composers Association.

Since Dec. 1, 1935, according to the new import and exchange regime, all imported merchandise is subject to a new 12 per cent ad valorem tax, collected with other existing duties at the point of entry. An increase in the turnover tax also was effected Dec. 1, 1935, by the adoption of new norms for determining average values. It raised the "established value" on films from 1,500 lei per 100 kilograms to 2,300 lei, at which rate the regular 12.50 per cent ad valorem turnover tax also is assessed.

There are 350 motion picture halls, 52 in Bucharest. Almost all are wired for sound.

UNION OF SOVIET SOCIALIST REPUBLICS

The foreign trade of the Soviet Union is a monopoly of the Government. All contracts made abroad for exportation of goods from that country are made by agencies of the People's Commissariat for Foreign Trade, or under authorization of that Commissariat. Foreign trade transactions are entered into, as a general rule, through representatives of State economic and commercial organizations authorized to enter directly into foreign trade transactions under the general supervision of the People's Commissariat for Foreign Trade. In the United States, the principal purchasing and selling agency is Amtorg Trading Corporation, 261 Fifth avenue, New York City.

The agency through which motion picture films are imported and exported is the Intergkino, Maly Gnezdnikovski Perculok No. 7, Moscow. The agency in the United States of this organization is Amkino Corporation, 723 Seventh Avenue, New York City. The Intergkino, in purchasing foreign films, no longer adheres to a policy of exchange to the same degree as before and has purchased several films from foreign companies which have not purchased Soviet films in exchange.

Censorship is very strict.

Product shown is almost entirely Soviet films.

The following pictures were produced and exhibited in the 1935-36 season:

Sound pictures	62
Silent pictures	30
Pictures instructive in technical hygiene and school subjects:
(a) Sound	20
(b) Silent	109
Current Events	29
Pictures instructive in military subjects	3
Animated pictures	1

Intergkino is not a producing organization. It exports films produced by other organizations operating under the supervision of the Chief Administration of the Motion Picture Industry of the USSR.

Taxes are high.

Moving picture theatres in the Soviet Union are estimated at a total of 34,990 of all kinds, 2,285 sound-equipped.

SOUTH AFRICA

There has been a complete absence of any legislation on films during the last year. Standards of entertainment are quite high; in fact, the trade considers local standards well above the average, and good entertainment is demanded, irrespective of country of origin. There are no quotas or contingent laws on American films.

The Board of Censorship has power to approve or reject a film uonconditionally, or subject to a condition that it shall be shown only to a class of persons specified by the Board or after specified portions have been cut. The Board shall not approve any film that prejudicially affects the safety of the State, is calculated to disturb peace or good order, prejudice the general welfare or be offensive to decency. Invariably decisions of the Board are upheld upon appeal. Censorship is so strict that distributors often turn down pictures and newsreels that have been passed in other countries.

There is a natural sympathetic feeling for British films, but the amount shown remains fairly constant at approximately 15% of the total. Service by airmail gives British newsreels an advantage in timeliness on American newsreels.

Local production by African Film Productions is of a high standard, but in the past has been restricted, with several exceptions, to topical and scenic productions very well received both here and in connection with publicity work abroad. Gaumont British filmed exteriors of "King Solomon's Mines" in South Africa.

Local production should be benefited by the introduction of films in the schools by the Film Division of the Union Education Department.

Taxation has remained high. In the Transvaal province, however, the tax on admissions of one shilling and less has been removed. High taxation prevents a more rapid increase in the number of theatres, but as indications are that the present prosperity of the country will be maintained, there is not much chance of importations decreasing.

There are about 300 theatres, 250 of them wired. A new theatre seating 2,000 was built in Durban, and plans for one were under consideration in Capetown. One of the largest in Johannesburg was opened in the fall of 1936.

SPAIN

According to advices the Spanish revolution, more than anything else, prevented establishment of a quota system on motion pictures in Spain in 1936. The proposed law in part contained the following proposals:

Protection and encouragement of national motion picture production were the aims set forth in the decree project, which provided for an exhibition contingent and assurance of exportation through application of "contingents of compensation."

The Consejo de Cinematografica (Motion Picture Council) would be empowered to issue regulations for enforcement of the decree.

Encouragement also would be given to development of equipment and film manufacturing activities and obligatory distribution and the showing of educational films.

The importer of foreign films which are not dubbed in Spanish in national studios would be required to assign 12 per cent of his gross receipts to the purchase or production of film entitled to be classed as nationally produced.

Importers of foreign films dubbed in Spanish in national studios would be required similarly to give 8 per cent of their gross receipts in Spain to such purchase or production.

It is provided that rental contracts should not apply to more than a single production, the title of which is mentioned in the contract. Rental contracts would be made on an official model of the Ministry of Agriculture, Industry and Commerce, and a separate contract would be required for each theatre in which the film would be shown.

A license of importation would be required to be obtained through the Ministry of Agriculture, Industry and Commerce, and distributors would be obliged to obtain authorization from the Ministry.

The percentage of nationally produced films which would be obligatorily exhibited in return for the right to exhibit foreign films varies, but one suggestion was said to provide for an initial quota of two Spanish films for each 10 foreign films.

Ratification of the agreement entered into by exchange of notes between Spain and Peru on films considered "offensive" by either party was made by a decree of May 29, 1936.

Each government contracts to prohibit the exhibition within its territory of films having reference to the other party and considered offensive by the latter.

Censorship is officially applied at Madrid in the office of the Director-General of Public Safety. Few films, however, are initiatively barred.

Films may be withdrawn on protest of foreign embassies in Madrid, and the Civil Governor of each province may ban the showing of a film deemed objectionable on instruction from the Ministry of the Interior.

Approximately 50 per cent of the films shown are of American make. Accurate figures are officially lacking. Customs statistics give only weight in kilograms of imported films which are subject to a duty of 25 gold pesetas per kilogram net weight when imported from the United States and 15 gold pesetas per kilogram when imported from France and a number of other European countries.

The Spanish Society of Authors (Sociedad de Autores) protects the musical works of Spanish authors used in sound films. The fee charged is 3 per cent of the total potential maximum seat sale of the theatre.

Production was greatly curtailed as the result of a construction strike at Madrid and the unsettled political situation. Total full-length film production for 1936, it was estimated in the trade, was only about 32 to 40 as compared to 50 last year. The capacity of Spanish studios is placed at 80 full-length films annually.

On entering the motion picture field in Spain an exhibitor finds himself enmeshed by a maze of taxes. The principal State taxes are: The real estate tax (contribucion territorial), the industrial tax (contribucion industrial) and the workman's retirement (retiro obrero).

There are approximately 3,500 theatres in Spain, 1,600 wired for sound.

SWEDEN

There are no quota or contingent laws.

As a rule films showing suicides, terrifying scenes, and crimes contrary to general law and morals, as well as acting that may have a bad influence, are forbidden. However, there seems to be no hard and fast rule. Children under 15 years may attend the showing of certain films only.

During 1935 the Swedish Film Censoring Bureau examined a total of 5,924 films (including copies) having a length of 4,304,887 meters. Of these 2,067, with a length of 1,876,538 meters, were American; 3,055, with a length of 1,689,620 meters, were Swedish; and 802 films, having a length of 738,729 meters, were from other countries. Of the total number, 3,378 films, with a length of 906,238 meters, were news reels and so-called nature or travel films, comedies and other "shorts."

During the first six months of 1936 (latest available figures) the total number of films (including copies) censored was 2,811, having a length of 2,104,215 meters. Of these 987, with a length of 976,014 meters were American; 1,441, with a length of 757,995 meters, were Swedish; and 383, with a length of 370,206 meters, were from other countries. Of the total, 1,651 films with a length of 404,954 meters, were news reels and other "shorts."

All pictures, except a few educational and "nature" films, were with sound.

About 50 percent of the films shown are of American make.

Copyright relations were established by Royal Decree No. 381, dated May 30, 1919, and amended by Royal Decree No. 74, dated April 24, 1931.

There were 27 features produced in Sweden in 1935. Aktb. Svensk Filmindustri, Stockholm, made 12 features in its own studio in 1935, the same number as in 1934. In addition, this company produced a large number of short subjects and news reels in 1936. The 1935 number of features made by the other Swedish companies, all of which are in Stockholm, is given below:

Name of Company	Number
Europafilm	4
Wivefilm	3
Irefilm	2
Svensk Talfilm	2
Triangelfilm	1
Anglofilm	1
S. B. D.	1
Svenska Aktb. Nordisk Tonefilm	1

In 1935 taxes levied on tickets sold by motion picture houses in town and cities in Sweden (for rural districts no statistics were available), amounted to 3,491,717 crowns (today's rate of exchange: Swedish crowns, 3.97 to $1.00 U. S. currency), against 3,050,599 crowns in 1934. The total amount of tickets sold in town and cities in 1935 was 23,278,116 crowns. (This figure is an estimate only as the exact amount cannot be calculated). Taxes are governed by Royal Decrees of May 30, 1919, No. 256, and July 16, 1919, No. 529, and are levied as follows:

Price of Ticket (Sw. Crowns)	Tax (Sw. Crowns)
0.50	0.05
0.50 to 1.00	0.10
1.00 to 1.50	0.20
1.50 to 2.00	0.30
2.00 to 2.50	0.40
2.50 to 3.00	0.50

About 1,620 theatres were listed at the end of 1935; 1,641 on Oct. 31, 1936. All were wired for sound. Approximately 400 of the total number of cinemas operate only from one to three times a week.

SWITZERLAND

In 1936 a Committee was appointed by the Ministry of the Interior to look into the feasibility of establishing a domestic producing industry. The principal advocates were the tourist associations. The location for a new Swiss film studio, to be constructed with the aid of government subsidies, narrowed down to Zurich and Montreaux. A sharp dispute between these two cities. The Commission which had advocated the establishing of a large domestic studio reversed its previous decision that the federal government should abstain from granting a subsidy for this purpose under the present condition.

In order to prevent new cinemas from being opened, the Swiss Association of Cinema Owners put a ban on new members. Because, by agreement with the film rental agencies, only member theatres may rent films, it was practically impossible for a new exhibitor to be certain of a constant supply of films.

There was no federal censorship, control being vested in the individual Cantons. While the authorities are generally liberal, restriction is more marked in the French-speaking section, especially in the Cantons of Valais, Vaud, and Fribourg.

Half the pictures shown are American, German, and recently Austrian, films constitute an important source of competition to American films. French films, which rank third in popularity, also are being shown in German-speaking Switzerland in the original version, while Italian pictures are exhibited only in a comparatively small area, chiefly the Canton of Ticino.

The copyright convention adhered to on June 14, 1934, between the "Societe des Auteurs, Compositeurs et Editeurs de Musique," Paris, and representatives of Swiss cinemas, continues in force. The convention is retroactive to July 1, 1933.

Production is limited chiefly to advertising media and educational films, aerial views of the Alpine regions, and skiing contests. The leading producer of such short films is the Praessens Film A.-G., Zurich. Attempts to establish a domestic film industry producing features have thus far been unsuccessful.

Amusement taxes are fixed by the various Cantons, averaging from ten to fifteen percent of the price of the ticket. The practice of taxing theatre tickets has become more widespread the last two or thre years; at present only the Cantons of Schaffhausen, Glarus, Aarau, and Thurgau do not impose amusement taxes.

Restrictions against construction of new theatres have been tightened and, as a result, the number of theatres and their combined seating capacity declined in 1936. There are 334 cinemas in Switzerland with a combined seating capacity of 128,800. distributed as follows:

	Theatres	Seating Capacity
German and Italian Switzerland	215	90,500
French Switzerland	119	38,300

SYRIA

American motion pictures are enjoying increasing popularity.

News reels are being severely censored and scenes of the Abyssinian War, Spanish revolution and Fascist or Nazi demonstrations are cut.

Under the law, no moving pictures shall be produced in the States under French mandate for public exhibition on paid tickets or invitation without prior authorization from the High Commissioner.

A foreign company can no longer take pictures in Syria and ship its undeveloped negative films, since it has to exhibit them before the Censorship Commission. As there are not in Syria up-to-date studio-laboratories, such a company would have either to arrange for the local development of its films or renounce its local production.

Beirut is the only port through which films may be imported. Films may not be cleared from the customs unless a special permit is first secured from the Surete Generale (French Police). A commission established by the French High Commission previews the films, censoring them as to morals, public security, respect of religions and races, and political propaganda. The censorship fee is Syrian piaster 0.32 per meter.

According to importers the proportion of American pictures shown in 1936 was approximately the same as during 1935, namely, about 40%.

A Syrian and an Italian established a motion picture studio under the name Societe de Cinematographie Lumnar. They produced a sound Arabic picture (Dans les Ruines de Baalbeck). A small sketch produced by this company was shown in Beirut. The sound was fairly good, but the photography and acting were called poor.

The 10 percent gross receipts tax has been replaced by the following:

Syrian piasters 0.60 per seat at every performance in first class theatres; 0.30 in second class; 0.05 in third class.

Censorship tax:—35 Syrian piasters per 100 linear meters of silent film; 25 per 100 of sound.

There are 24 theatres, all wired for sound.

French is the language of the talking films in Syria, although Arabic is the language of the population. From time to time English talking films are shown, but unless the picture is remarkably good, receipts are far less than those of a French talking picture.

TRINIDAD

Returns from exhibitors for the year 1935 showed that the requirements of the Cinematograph (British Films) Ordinances of 1932 and 1934 have not been complied with. At Port of Spain, against the British Feature Quota of 25%, about 5% actually were shown, and of the 25% quota of British short subjects about 4% were shown.

The unpopularity of such British films as had been obtainable and the prohibitive cost of the class of British films which could compete with good foreign films were given as the reasons for noncompliance.

On Dec. 17, 1936, the Governor issued a Proclamation amending the Cinematograph Ordinance of 1932, in which the following quotas for British films were fixed:

Annual Period	British films to total films exhibited. (Excluding new films)	British news films (including B. W. I. films) to total news films exhibited	B.W.I. films to total British news films exhibited
1937	15 %	50%	10%
1938	17½%	50%	10%
Subsequent years.	20 %	50%	10%

Censorship

Public criticism of the censorship system resulted in appointment by the Government of a Board of Censors with 10 members. In 1935 there were 8 entire rejections, 16 deletions and 21 restricted to adult attendance.

Ninety per cent of the films shown are American.

A small number of newsreels were produced.

No special taxes are imposed on theatres and there is no tax on theatre admissions. The exhibitors continue to pay a censorship fee of $1.00 for each reel of sound film up to 1,000 feet and 12 cents for each additional 100 feet or fraction thereof. This fee also applies to trailers.

There are 19 theatres, all sound, in the Crown Colony of Trinidad and Tobago, British West Indies; 6 in Port of Spain, 3 in San Fernando, 1 in Scarborough, Tobago, and one each in 8 smaller towns in the Colony.

Westerns still rank first with a large percentage of the population, with musical comedies running a close second. Several of the outstanding hits of the past year have been shown to capacity houses. The bringing in of the higher class of pictures can be dated from the time of the forming of two new companies in Trinidad, which operate a circuit of theatres in Port of Spain as well as in the country districts. When the theatres were controlled by one company, the pictures shown were years old and the equipment was deplorable.

There are two shows daily at the principal theatres, at 4:30 and 8:30 p. m. Juvenile matinees on Saturday mornings were started in several Port of Spain theatres.

The usual daily program consists of one newsreel, either American or British, one short, several trailers, and one feature.

TURKEY

In the first ten months of 1936 five foreign films were cut and the exhibition of two foreign and one local film was prohibited by the local board of censorship.

At the instance of the Minister of Interior the Council of Ministers approved on July 29, 1936, Decree No. 2/5092, which provides that the Board of Censors shall be composed of a delegate from the Chief of Staff, the Director General of the Press, the Ministry of Interior and the Ministry of Education. It also provided that films shall be reviewed at Ankara if upon an unfavorable decision by the Board in Istanbul the exhibitors make an appeal.

Article 8 of the new law prohibits projection of films embodying political propaganda, vilifying or reflecting unfavorably upon any nation or race, presenting oriental people and countries as being savage or primitive, films contrary to good manners and morals or tending to dishonor the army, tending to encourage crime, containing religious propaganda, and films in such worn conditions as likely to be injurious to the eyesight.

All titles and explanatory matter must be in the Turkish language only and shall be correctly worded and well written.

During the first ten months of 1936 a total of 112 feature sound films were exhibited in Turkey—56 American, 27 French, 22 German, 4 English, 2 Austrian, and 1 Russian. Of the 56 American films, 14 were exhibited in the English version, 2 in original French and 7 dubbed in Turkish. Of the remaining 33 American films, 31 were exhibited in dubbed French, 1 in dubbed Spanish, and one was a silent film. In addition 52 American newsreels in French and Turkish versions were released.

American features continued to retain their popularity.

French films released were much better than those exhibited in 1934 and their popularity grew. German musical comedies and operettas continued to retain their popularity, although the German language was an adverse factor.

Films in the English language fail to draw large audiences unless they are features of unusual interest.

Exhibitors report that the public is becoming increasingly particular in its selection of features.

The public continued to show decided preference for good musical comedy films and for films dramatizing well known French novels, also increasing interest in films portraying well known historical incidents. Preference for films with a happy ending continued to prevail.

Turkey is not a signatory of the Berne Convention for the protection of artistic and literary rights, but the principal exhibitors in Istanbul have an agreement whereby they forego exhibition of pirated films.

There are two studios in Istanbul equipped to produce sound films. During the year one of the local studios produced a film picturing national scenery, but the picture, costing $40,000 and two years in the making, did not meet with approval of the Government and the censorship authorities and its exhibition was prohibited, the bar later being lifted.

The two local studios dubbed into Turkish the Gaumont-British "Chu Chin Chou," the German film "Artisten," and six American pictures.

It is believed that there are 121 active theatres (93 wired), seating 46,600 to 48,000, and including 30 provincial theatres exhibiting silent pictures.

URUGUAY

Since the beginning of 1936 importers have been granted free controlled exchange (dirigido) without any restrictions.

The Theatre Inspection Department of the Montevideo City Government maintains a censorship board which, however, has failed to function for years.

Eighty per cent of product shown is American.

American Convention held at Buenos Aires Aug. 11, 1910, and ratified July 13, 1914, is the basis of copyright application.

Local production is restricted to occasional newsreels.

A municipal tax of 6% is collected on admissions in Montevideo.

Of the estimated 128 theatres, 124 are wired for sound. Seventy theatres are listed in Montevideo with 38,190 seats. One company said 58 theatres were actually in operation in other parts of the country with 24,510 seats.

VENEZUELA

There is no national censorship law. Pictures are supposed to be censored in each State in which they are released, but generally the original censoring in Caracas is sufficient. As a rule, the censorship is less strict regarding morality than regarding communistic propaganda. Very few, if any films, are refused consorship.

Ninety-one per cent of product shown in 1935 was American; the remaining nine per cent was distributed among Germany, England, France and Spanish countries, in the order named.

The Venezuelan copyright law (Official Gazette of Aug. 12, 1928) makes provision for the copyrighting of motion pictures along with other "Intellectual Property."

There is no regular production. A few small enterprises make occasional travelogues and newsreels, particularly the Laboratorio Nacional in Maracay and Caracas.

There is a Federal amusement tax based upon the number of seats. Each State may also impose additional direct admission taxes. In Caracas and the Federal District, where all new pictures first are released, a new tax of 10 per cent has been levied on admissions.

In the new Venezuelan Customs Tariff Law, which became effective on Oct. 23, 1936, the import duties on printed cinematographic films were increased from Bs. 1.9569 to Bs. 2.60 per gross kilogram. Rates on unprinted films remained approximately the same, while projectors and accessories were increased from Bs. 1.9569 to Bs. 5.00 per gross kilogram. The official exchange rate as this is written is Bs. 3.93 per dollar.

The exact number of theatres cannot be determined, for in the Interior, bull-rings and other open-air spaces are used, as well as vacant buildings. There are approximately 111 theatres operating in Venezuela, 35 in the city of Caracas and immediate environs, and in the Maracaibo district, about 20. No silent pictures are shown.

All theatres in Venezuela are either wired for sound or, in the Interior, have portable sound equipment.

YUGOSLAVIA

Under regulations prescribed by the Minister of Commerce and Industry of Yugoslavia, the management and control of production, import and trade in motion pictures, has been placed in the hands of a State Film Central, whose duties include also the sponsoring of domestic production and the aiding of educational and propaganda pictures.

Registration fees are collected by the Central as follows: (a) For pictures of foreign origin for amusement, as well as for advertising all films, an amount corresponding to one-half of the censor fees; (b) for all cultural pictures and domestic pictures, one-fourth. In effect, registration fees will amount to approximately $8 for each American feature brought on the Yugoslav market.

Theatres are obliged to show at every performance one or more films of a cultural nature. They must also show domestic pictures of at least 5 per cent of the total length of programs shown quarterly. For theatres giving daily shows and which change programs less than six times monthly, this percentage is increased to 10. To ascertain whether these obligations have been fully complied with, the Central issues forms to cover each performance. For these forms one dinar is charged.

The State Film Central collects for these forms 25 dinars each for films up to 600 meters in length, and 50 dinars each for films exceeding that length.

Yugoslav censorship is, for political reasons, very strict. This censorship is in the hands of the Ministry of Commerce and Industry, control of the State Film Central having been transferred to that Ministry.

Sixty-five per cent of the films shown are American.

One hundred films, consisting of cultural, news and advertising films were produced in 1935.

A special tax is assessed on films imported or produced in the country, as follows: (1) on cultural films, 1.50 dinars per meter; (2) on the other films, 3.00 dinars per meter. Films produced in the country pay one-half of these taxes until the expiration of the term of ten years.

For the examination of films, either foreign or domestic, 0.45 dinars per meter, and for other expenses, 0.10 dinars per meter, aggregating 0.55 dinars per meter.

Of the 318 theatres in Yugoslavia, 263 are wired for sound.

FILMS IN ARGENTINA

by NATALIO BRUSKI
in Buenos Aires

In MOTION PICTURE ALMANAC of 1936-37 we mentioned that the year 1935 would be remembered outstandingly in Argentine motion picture history, because of the record number of releases, 504 features. In 1936 this amount again was surpassed, reaching to a total of 517 features originated in 15 different countries, including Argentina, which produced 17 pictures.

In accordance with the working schedule adopted by several producing companies, 17 features of local origin were released the past season, as against the 12 in 1934.

National production is patronized by tolerant public, and the press has constantly encouraged it with amiable criticism of obvious inaccuracies. Nevertheless, progress is not what should have been expected in view of the potential market and the encouragement given. Only recently has been established the Instituto Cinematográfico Argentino (Argentine Film Institute), which is dedicating itself to a study of measures to improve the business.

The product nevertheless has achieved a notable commercial success. In the suburban houses and in the interior it immediately won the audiences and the exhibitors have allotted Saturdays and Sundays to local films.

Acquisition of new equipment promises an impetus this year. Several new studios have been opened and the construction of more is underway.

Pictures of foreign origin are presented in their original language. There have been, so far, no restrictive measures.

In 1936 Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer imported several pictures dubbed into Spanish. A survey in the Cine Florida showed that two of every three spectators preferred the system of film dubbing. These pictures had been dubbed in Barcelona (Spain), and the outbreak of the Civil War in that country frustrated the initiative. In consequence, all films imported are exhibited in their original language, with Spanish titles superposed.

A group of local producers established a defensive association. The first steps in this direction were taken in the year 1934. This association practically disappeared.

In 1936 in view of the ever increasing Argentine production, the producers again established the basis of an organization named, as before, Asociación de Productores de Películas Argentinas (Argentine Film Producers Association).

The fundamental objects of the APPA are: ample publicity for the local industry, soliciting in that direction the contributions of all the propaganda institutions; assistance of the proper authorities for anything that might encourage the Argentine industry.

While these projects were in progress, by decree and in accordance with the dispositions of Article 69 of the literary and intellectual property law, there was created the Instituto Cinematográfico Argentino (Argentine Film Institute), the technical management of which was placed in the hands of Carlos Alberto Pessano, who, in conjunction with the president of the National Culture Commission, Dr. Matias Sanchez Sorondo, national senator, was to devise the organization, regulation and functioning of the institution, to determine the method of intervention by the state in cinematographic activities, and the measures pertaining to fiscalization of show business and protection of the national industry.

In 1936, for the first time, American companies signed agreements with local producers for distribution of their product. Paramount Pictures has distributed for the AIA the film "Radio Bar." United Artists is distributing four films produced by Porteña Films, and Warner Brothers three, which will be produced by Pampa Films.

Seventeen domestic features were released in the Argentine, as follows: "Amalia" (Argentina Sono Film), "Ayudame a Vivir (SIDE), "Canillita"

Sound and Projection

In the Argentine Republic there are 1,500 motion picture houses, 100 of them not operating in service. Of the 1,400 operating, Western Electric sound equipment is in 70 houses; RCA Photophone, 120; Aristofón (Argentine manufacture), 200; Klang Film, 30; Philips, 20; Pacent, 150; Ditico (Ditlevsen), 200, and of varied Argentine manufacture, 700. Only 15 per cent have modern projection equipment.

Censorship

We have in the city of Buenos Aires a Censorship Committee of "ad-honorem" nature, formed by representatives of national and municipal entities. Always have displayed excellent judgment.

Last season the Argentine Catholic Bureau of Morals sent a circular to the film distributing companies and requested their cooperation in eliminating any passages to which the Bureau's previews objected. The Church through its own publications passes upon films.

The foregoing applies to the films already produced. On future productions the Instituto Cinematografico Argentino (Argentine Film Institute) decrees a sort of censorship.

Foreign Productions

In 1936 there were 499 foreign pictures released, of which 365 came from the United States. This figure indicates a reduction from 1935, in which year 400 American films were shown, constituting 79.36 per cent, as against 70.74 per cent in 1936.

Columbia Pictures released its product in the Opera Theatre and Cine Suipacha.

Twentieth Century-Fox, with release through the Broadway Cine, reported 20 per cent improvement over 1935. Victor J. Schochet is director.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer released through the Cine Ideal and Ambassador

In September, 1936, Stuart Dunlap was appointed directing manager for South America. In Argentina, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is handled by Onofre Moner.

Paramount's Argentine director, John B. Nathan, said the year 1936 was very satisfactory and that the building of modern theatres in Buenos Aires was very encouraging. Paramount released through the Cine Astor.

RKO-Radio exhibited its films through S. A. Radiolux in the Cine Ideal and Ambassador. The first managing director is Nat Libeskind.

Universal, under the management of Monroe Isen, dean of the managers of the American distributors in this country, moved into its new premises in Calle Lavalle 1860, Buenos Aires. Releases were made through the Opera and Suipacha.

Warner Bros. also dedicated new premises at Calle Tucuman 1938, Buenos Aires. Harry Novak is the manager.

ACTIVITIES IN AUSTRALIA

by CLIFF HOLT
in Melbourne

More than 1,400 wired theatres are now operating in Australia to an estimated weekly attendance of two millions, and since the total population of the Commonwealth is short of seven millions, it is not surprising that Australians are described as being among the most picture-minded in the world. Gross receipts in Australian motion picture houses are computed at $33,800,000 annually and as much as $250,000 has been grossed in this market by one picture.

American product still holds pride of place so far as the number of releases is concerned and this also applies to box-office performance. In the latest annual censorship report it is shown that out of a total importation of 1,684 films of all classes, 1,084 came from the United States and 489 from the United Kingdom. Of the features imported, 348 were American and 103 British. The proportions are almost exactly those of the preceding year.

As a producing country servicing its own market, Australia offers no competition whatsoever to overseas producers and probably never will; but it seems that the local producing industry is at last establishing itself on solid foundations, and within the next two or three years it probably will settble down to production of about 30 worthwhile features per annum.

The State Government of N.S.W. passed a Quota Act which was designed to speed up production developments, but after twelve months of operation the Quota has failed to fulfill its purpose. It is very obvious that the advance that has been made would have been accomplished had the New South Wales Quota Act not been created, since only the producing units which were actually shooting film before the quota was passed are still doing so. The difficulty facing the protagonists of Quota in this country is that it can be made a Commonwealth measure only after each individual State has legislated for it, because complete film powers are vested in the States, and the Federal Government has no constitutional powers over films except in relation to censorship and tariffs. The result is that as long as the other States refuse to introduce quota, the incidence of the N.S.W. Quota is restricted in its benefits to producers to about 25 per cent of the total Australian market.

The formation of the Film Board of Trade was one of the important recent developments here. Its personnel is made up of distributor and exhibitor representatives and its purpose is to settle trade disputes which hitherto have remained unsettled or have been taken either to the Government or to court. The Board has not been functioning long enough to either prove or disprove itself, but there appears to be no reason why it should not be a success and thereby overcome many disputes which formerly would have involved one section or another in unnecessary and expensive litigation.

By the time this edition of Motion Picture Almanac is off the presses, the Catholic Film Censorship system will very likely be in full operation. This also is an important phase of Australia's film news of the year under review. The keynote of the plan is that every Catholic in the Commonwealth (numbering more than one million) will be required to take a yearly pledge to stay away from pictures which come under the Catholic Central Film Committee's ban. In its classification of films the Committee will be guided by the findings of the American Legion of Decency and also the Australian Censorship Board.

The primary objects the Committee will set out to achieve are officially stated to be as follows:

(1) To insure that at children's matinees only "approved" pictures are shown. Any picture classified A1 by the Legion of Decency in America, and subsequently passed by the Australian Federal Censor as "suitable for general exhibition," would be "approved." Other imported or local films would be approved separately.

(2) To insure that the censorship classification shall be prominently displayed on every poster advertisement, and on every film presented or about to be presented in Australia, in a form easily distinguishable by intending patrons.

(3) To secure censorship over all films which are outside the scope of the present censorship.

Theatre building has proceeded space the last few months to an extent which is possibly unparalleled since the days when the theatre-building "war" between Union Theatres and Hoyts was at its height. For 1937 Hoyts has increased its expenditure to £150,000 on new theatres and the reconstruction of existing houses. MGM is building in Brisbane and the independent exhibitors of the Sydney and Melbourne suburbs are going almost step by step with the circuits. If the rate is maintained, it will not be long before the number of cinemas in the Commonwealth reaches 1,500, a phenomental total measured to population.

At the moment of writing there are indications that the five-year "working agreement" between Hoyts and Union Theatres Corporation, which expires on Jan. 1, 1938, will be renewed for several years, and possibly for as long as 20 years. Hoyts and Union are the principal circuits on the Australian market, Hoyts has city interests in all capitals, namely Sydney, Melbourne, Brisbane, Adelaide and Perth and large suburban interests in Sydney and Melbourne. The company also controls a few country situations, totaling a circuit of approximately, 70 theatres. In addition to these there are another 40 houses which are interested with Hoyts in pooling arrangements. Union also has city interests in each capital and further holdings in Hobart and Launceston (Tasmania), and in Newcastle, a city in New South Wales.

General Theatres Corporation is virtually the holding company for an amalgamation of each company's city assets and has no financial connection with the suburban houses conducted by Hoyts; but its effect is felt insofar as, by buying through the corporation, Hoyts and Union are able to get more attractive rentals for their neighborhood circuits. Accordingly the continuance or otherwise of GTC is of minor importance to all distributors operating in the market, and without exception they would be pleased to see Hoyts and Union enter into active competition again and the existence of GTC come to an end.

Following is a statistical summary of the film industry in Australia:

AUSTRIA AND ITS PRODUCT

by HANS LORANT
in Vienna

Twenty-one feature pictures were produced in Austria in 1936. Twenty of these were admitted to Germany, but one picture ("Fräulein Lilly") was refused the German import permit because it did not fulfill requirements of the Aryan paragraph.

These films were made in three Vienna studios. Two of the studios are owned by the biggest Austrian producing and distributing company, Tobis-Sascha. One is in Sievering and the second in Rosenhugel, both suburbs of Vienna. The Rosenhugel studio is the largest in Austria, consisting of three shooting rooms and a synchronizing room equipped with a modern laboratory. The third studio, the Selenophon in Schönbrunn, is smaller than the others. In this studio are made the official Austrian newsreels, the short films and educationals, the release of which is obligatory for every Austrian theatre. Selonophon owns the synchronizing studio on Rennweg, where the German dubbing of foreign films is done. All three studios use Tobis-Klangfilm sound apparatus.

Mayer's Film Bureau is the only studio which makes colored films, with the Gasparcolor or the Agfa-Bipack system. Colored industrials and educationals, which are very popular in Austria, are made in this studio.

The production expenditures of feature films made in Austria varied between 500,000 and 1,200,000 schillings. The production costs were covered chiefly by bookings in Germany, which averaged 500,000 schillings for each film. According to the film agreement made between the Austrian and the German trade in April, 1936, fourteen Austrian films might be imported into Germany annually without permit tickets. These films enjoyed all the privileges and advantages granted to German-made films. Naturally these privileged fourteen Austrian films had to answer the requirements of the Aryan paragraph.* Owing to currency difficulties, the Austrian producers were unable to get money out of Germany and were compelled to purchase raw material out of their blocked assets, also to engage German talent and German technical staffs in order to make use of money which they could not get across the border.

It is evident from all this that the Austrian film industry is largely dependent on Germany and is increasingly so in 1937. Independent Austrian film production, called "emigrant production" because it often engages talent and technical staffs banished from Germany, is almost completely at an end. Producers found that it did not pay them to make films with high production costs if the German market was lost to them. Eight such independent pictures had been made in 1935, but only one was produced in 1936, and even this one picture, "Fräulein Lilly," starring Franciska Gaal, a most popular star on the Continent and now contracted to Hollywood, was a disastrous failure. Producers drew the conclusion that it was impossible to make films pay without the German market. This means that 1937 probably will see final extinction of that part of Austrian film production which cannot count on distribution in Germany.

The fourteen films admitted to Germany annually were not enough to occupy the three Austrian studios throughout the year. There were great gaps in production work at each of the studios in 1936, and the Tobis-Sascha studios were unoccupied for several months towards the end of the year. The institution of the highest authority in the trade, the Osterreichische Filmkonferenz, with Dr. Lanske as president, grew alarmed and started negotiations with German film authorities. The Austrians wanted to raise the figure of their import quota to Germany. They also demanded that the film business should be managed in a private clearing system and not by the official clearing procedure which took endless time to settle the currency transfer affairs. The Germans demanded that Austria import more films than hitherto.

The Austrians were unable to attain what they wanted. It was decided that the Austrian import quota should not be raised. No more than 14 privileged Austrian films may be exported to Germany in the future. The Germans granted a small concession regarding the Austrian producers' blocked money. Accordingly, film debts are being settled by private clearing system, in such a way that the Austrian producers will get about 10 per cent of the sums due to them in cash, and, for the rest, will have to buy raw material in Germany and engage German talent. They may also buy German films for Austria.

In the summer of 1936, Dr. Lanske visited the United States and discussed with Will H. Hays the possibilities of increased exportation of Austrian films to America. He also negotiated for film production in Austria by American companies. But no agreement was reached.

While, in the previous years, 70 to 120 American films were imported to Austria, this figure jumped to 155 in 1936. Then the government raised the price of the contingent tickets for American films from 3,600 to 4,500 schillings. This was a great blow to American companies and may have serious consequences. Some American film companies were thinking of closing down their Austrian branches. Profits, already on the decline, went down nearly to zero.

RKO alone decided voluntarily to have a feature, "Mary of Scotland," synchronized in German in Austria. On its success or failure depends the decision of other American companies whether or not to synchronize part of their production in Austria.

MGM and Twentieth Century-Fox have part of their production synchronized in Germany, and these get 50 per cent better sales than the original English-speaking films. On the other hand, pictures dubbed in German in Austria are not allowed to be imported into Germany and Czechoslovakia, so that the expenses of synchronization must be covered entirely by the comparatively small Austrian and Swiss markets, and perhaps one or two other small countries where the population is more familiar with German than with English.

*(Austrian films admitted to Germany beyond the 14 privileged films were considered as ordinary foreign films and were granted no advantages.)

In spite of the great increase in he number of imported American films, the financial results are far less satisfactory than in previous years. Added to this is the fact that, in the case of most American films, only one or two copies were shown at a time because the permit ticket for films running in less than three copies is much cheaper than that of films running in three or more copies. Among the 155 American films released in 1936, 65 were released with one copy, 54 with 2 copies, 18 with 3 copies, 6 with 4 copies, 4 with 5 copies, 4 with 6 copies, 1 with 7 copies, two with 8 copies and I with nine copies. Comparing this with the statistical data of 112 imported German films: 41 were exhibited in 5 copies, 17 in 6 copies, 16 in 4 copies, 15 in 3 copies, 4 in 7 copies, 6 in 8 copies and only 8 in one copy and 5 in 2 copies. Of locally-made films, 10 were shown in 7 copies, 6 in 8 copies, 3 in 6 copies, 2 in 5 copies, 1 in 4 copies and 1 in 3 copies, in the country.

In this way, although a greater number of American films were released than locally made and German-made films put together, their financial results were not as high. Only a comparatively small fraction of the public likes English-speaking pictures. Those who do, belong mostly to the audiences of the smart Vienna deluxe theatres, which release English-speaking films the greater part of the year. In subsequent-runs and in theatres in country towns and villages, American films have very little chance of success except when shown in German versions. Under the circumstances, it is natural that American films, which practically are flooding the Austrian market, have no chance of being properly exploited. Deluxe exhibitors booked such a great number of American films that they could not retain them for a long run in case of a success. Even the best features had no chance of a long run.

That is why several American companies were not as averse to the government's proposition of reducing the contingent quota to 70 films a year as might have been expected. As matters stood at the beginning of 1937, the total profits of the 155 imported films were much lower than the profits reached by the 70 or 120 pictures imported annually in the previous years. The distributors made, on an average, about 20,000 schillings ($4,000) on American pictures favorably received by the public. German-speaking films yielded at least three or four times as much, even if they did not meet with the public's approval. The highest takings that might be attained by an American film would be from 80,000 to 100,000 schillings ($16,000 to $20,000), but the film would have to be a tremendous hit to get that much for the distributor. Such success is rare; no American film has achieved it in Austria for years. The most successful film in 1936 was Columbia's "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," which brought the distributor about 50,000 schillings ($10,000). This was nearly a record. The total takings of "Romeo and Juliet," for example, were only 1,200 schillings on the first day in a theatre where previously a German-speaking film had made at least 3,000 schillings daily. All the local branches of American companies put together will not be able to send more than $50,000 to their head offices as the total profit made on American films in Austria in 1936. A few years ago this sum was as high as $100,000.

In 1936 many American films were shown here which were quite foreign to the tastes of local audiences and they failed absolutely. On the other hand, the quality of German films, at a very low standard in the previous years, showed considerable improvement in 1936. A great part of the public, which hitherto had gone only to see American films, took to viewing German pictures in 1936.

Two American companies, Columbia and RKO, opened local branches in Vienna last year, and both reported themselves satisfied with the business results of 1936. Both adhered to the policy of importing comparatively few features, only about 15 a season, but very carefully chosen ones, all to suit the tastes of the Austrian public.

In 1936, world premieres of two American films were held for the first time at Salzburg during the festival week. The two films shown were "The Great Ziegfeld" and "Romeo and Juliet."

The Filmbegutachtungsstelle (Film Censorship Office), working jointly with the Ministry of Education, viewed 240 films last year, and passed 24 as "valuable from a cultural point of view" and 28 as "commendable from an artistic point of view." Among the films admitted, 8 were Austrian, 18 German, 4 English and 14 American. The American films included "It Happened One Night," "Little Lord Fauntleroy," "Romeo and Juliet," "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," "Louis Pasteur" and "These Three."

PROBLEMS IN CHINA

by J. P. KOEHLER
in Shanghai

The year 1936 started promisingly for foreign films, but in the second half of the year receipts fell off decidedly, with a corresponding increase in exhibition of native product.

The total net return to all foreign film distributors was probably not much over Ch. $1,500,000 (U. S. $447,500) while the Government collected about Ch. $62,000 (U. S. $18,300) in censor fees. Foreign film distributors paid in addition approximately Ch. $22,000 (U. S. $6,350) for translations and other expenses in connection with Chinese Government censorship. Ninety per cent of this outlay was borne by the eight large American distributors (including a few British films released through United Artists), while direct British imports took only about 3 per cent of the total, the balance being taken up by the USSR (2.75 per cent), French, German and one or two other European films.

Chinese native product is gradually increasing in distribution, both in China and for export. Increasing also is the number of cinemas devoting full time to native productions. The average first-run playing time for a Chinese feature is eight to ten days, and for foreign films about four days.

There are 240 known exhibition outlets in China (including Hongkong-Kowloon and Macao), fitted with some sort of sound-on-film equipment and served either full or part time by foreign films. Apparently this is an increase over previous years, but reports now seem more nearly in line with the existing situation than heretofore. Exhibition centers, according to number of cinemas, are:

Shanghai	42	Changsha	10
Hongkong	28	Hankow	6
Canton	22	Chungking	7
Tientsin	21	Tsingtao	3
Peiping	12	Macao	5
Nanking	10	Soochow	5

Between the main centers, distribution is by railway express. Steamship lines are used for seaport cities. Airplane distribution can be but seldom is used, due to high charges, but it has served in emergency, as a film can be sent by air in 3½ hours that would take 3 or 4 days by steamer or rail. Telegraphic facilities are good, and radio telephone is available for fast communication between the Hongkong-Canton area and the Shanghai-Nanking territory.

Main distribution offices are in Shanghai, with branch exchanges for the large distributors in Hongkong and Tientsin. These three cities serve all of the country.

New construction was practically negligible in 1936, but early in 1937 there were several new projects underway in Shanghai and outports. New construction is using air-conditioning refrigeration, modern equipment and good design, but lacks the finish and "touch" of modern European and American motion picture theatres. Operation of best first-runs still lacks many things needed for first-class theatres. The best example of new construction is the State theatre, Nanking, seating 1,800 and modern in every respect.

Foreign investment in exhibition is negligible, though cinemas controlled by American or British registered companies are situated in Shanghai, Honkgong, Tsintao and a few other locations. Not more than 10 per cent of the total are under foreign registry, and of these practically all are investments of Chinese capital.

Hongkong, Macao, Shanghai International Settlement and Shanghai French Concession maintain separate censorship boards. In all of Shanghai films must have both the local and Chinese government censorship certificates. Nanking (Central government) censorship certificates are now required in all parts of China, as Canton relinquished local censorship when the southwestern government handed over control to Nanking in 1936.

Censorship fees for foreign films are as follows:

Shanghai (International Settlement and French Concessions): Nil.

Hongkong: Hk. 4.00 (U. S. $1.12) per reel.

Nanking government censor fees are as follows:

Fee, Ch. $20.00 (U. S. $6.00) per 500 meters.

License certificate and tax, Ch. $3.10 (U. S. $.97) for each item.

License certificate is issued for three (3) years only. Extension fees are double the original fee, that is, Ch. $40.00 (U. S. $12.00) per 500 meters.

Each item on a program must bear a photographic reproduction of the Chinese license certificate on the film and be screened at each showing, and the exhibitor must show the original certificate to any inspector present.

Heavy Penalties

A minimum fine of Ch. $300.00 (U. S. $89.90) is assessed for exhibition without a license certificate. A minimum fine of Ch. $60.00 (U. S. $17.00) is stipulated for first offense of advertising any film before it has been approved by the Nanking censors, the fine to be doubled for each succeeding offense.

Films banned must be re-exported through the Chinese Post Office (to the country of origin only) under bond of Ch. $600.00 (U. S. $170). Foreign films showing Chinese in any form of menial work or in crime or gambling are subject to rejection and confiscation of print.

Fees on Chinese Product

A fee of Ch. $15.00 (U. S. $4.47) for features and Ch. $5.00 (U. S. $1.50) for short subjects is paid. Total Chinese censorship fees paid in 1936 were very small compared with foreign film payments.

Five Chinese major studios produced 39 features and 17 shorts. Approximately 70 per cent of Chinese product was sound on film, 15 per cent synchronized and 15 per cent silent.

Chinese productions stand to have a prosperous year if technical quality, at present far below standard, is improved.

Foreign product of American origin will hold its own for the present, but the invasion of cinemas by Chinese product is increasing. Censorship of foreign film conditions may improve in certain phases. More USSR films are expected for 1937-38, though these at present have small outlet in the foreign controlled areas, due to political considerations and probably in the interests of public peace.

There is a small but profitable demand for good serials.

The extent of distribution of Chinese product is seen in the number of print copies for which extra Chinese license certificates are issued. Foreign films seldom use more than one print, some two, but rarely three or four prints. Chinese films use many prints, eight to twelve copies not uncommon.

Educational Efforts

Approximately 100 portable sound-on-film projectors are being used by the Chinese Government for widespread mass educational efforts, teaching good government, civic pride, health and sanitation, and political propaganda.

The Government's Central Studios in Nanking also turn out a considerable quantity of educational films.

Foreign educational films can be used, but the financial return may not make such importations worthwhile, unless something can be done about bringing in such films free of duty and censorship.

Theatre taxation disputes in China continue to be a source of irritation to exhibitors. There is no standard tax except the Government stamp tax on all tickets sold. Local "business taxes," police fees, taxes for each showing, and so on, have been instrumental in preventing any substantial reduction in admission charges. While exhibitors in many cases blame lack of success on the high costs of foreign films, theatres in general are in a run-down condition owing to poor managament and heavy taxation.

China is becoming increasingly "sports conscious." New stadia, outdoor and indoor sports, swimming pools, riding, golf and tennis, bear heavily against box-office receipts on occasion and season. Native stage shows, commonly known as "Chinese opera," draw heavily.

In Shanghi a new huge sports center, six stories high, involving gymnasiums, swimming pool, ice-skating, boxing, bowling, billiards, ice-hockey, basbet-ball accommodations, and to cost U. S. $500,000, is planned for 1938.

The Year in France

by PIERRE AUTRE
in Paris

I.—FILMS SHOWN IN FRANCE

447 pictures of more than five reels released. 116 French, 230 American, 41 German, 32 British.

II.—FRENCH PRODUCTION

117 features produced in French studios contrasting with 115 in the calendar year 1935. French production is still a matter of independent producers, but quality has largely improved. Fifty pictures produced in the first five months of 1937. Double billing has restricted short subject production.

III.—QUOTA AND CENSORSHIP

No change in the Quota: 94 dubbed pictures still allowed for each six months and original versions unlimited in number but cannot be shown in more than 15 French cinemas each. Censors received strict orders against gangster and murder pictures.

IV.—EXHIBITION

American pictures very successful in their original speaking versions in the 30 Paris and provincial specializing theatres. Ordinary cinemas of general exhibition showing mainly French pictures. Receipts have increased.

V.—TRADE ORGANIZATIONS

The industry is now organized in one solid unit: the General Confederation of the Cinema, including four branches: Technical Industries, Production, Distribution, Exhibition.

VI.—NEW PROBLEMS

New social laws, the 40-hour week in the studios and the theatres, application of collective contracts, increased wages and higher cost of living have made the situation very difficult. Threats of nationalization from the trade unions are a danger to existing concerns.

FILMS SHOWN IN FRANCE IN 1936

As the accompanying table shows, 447 pictures of over five reels were shown in France in 1936, contrasted with 463 in 1935, 441 in 1934, 418 in 1933, and 457 in 1932.

Actually, 330 were available for general exhibition. The others, 117 foreign talkers shown in original version, could be exhibited in only 15 cinemas—five in Paris and ten in the Provinces—under the Quota law. The exporting countries and pictures are:

FRENCH PRODUCTION

In the calender year 1936, fourteen French studios (85 companies) produced 117 features, two more than in 1935 and three more than in 1934.

The year definitely showed the supremacy of French production on the French market.

Following is a table of total French production, by studio, for two years.

	1936	1935
Pathe Cinema Studios	28	26
Paris Studios Cinema	16	21

Totals.....	117	115

Among these 117 features many were good enough to compete with foreign productions.

In the first five months of 1937, fifty pictures were produced, a large increase.

Most important of these was "Les Perles de la Couronne" (The Crown Pearls), produced by Serge Sandberg at a cost exceeding $400,000. It was written by Sacha Guitry, who directed it with Christian Jaque. Leading roles were portrayed by Sacha Guitry, Lynn Harding, Ermato Zaccone and 40 French, Italian and British stars.

QUOTA AND FILM REGULATION

The regulations concerning importation and exhibition of Foreign films in France since 1932 were extended on May 27, 1936, for another year, until June 30, 1937. At the time of writing, it was probable that they will remain the same until June 30, 1938.

The main provisions of these regulations, so called "Contingenrement" (quota) are:

(1) Release of only 94 dubbed films permitted in France for each six months (pictures exceeding three reels). (2) The dubbing must be done in studios in the French territory. (3) Foreign films in their original speaking versons, with the exception of animated cartoons, may be shown only in five cinemas in Paris, and ten in the Provinces, but exceptions may be accorded by the Minister of National Education.

CENSORSHIP

Censorship is still managed by the Minister of National Education. No changes since 1936 except very strict measures against gangster films. American films were the first affected. French censorship is above all political.

There is no official censorship for newsreels but they can be banned by simple order of the Police.

NEWSREELS IN FRANCE

There are five newsreels organizations, three French and two American, all weekly, as follows:

Pathe Journal, produced and released by Pathé Cinéma. Exchanges with American Pathé News.

Eclair Journal (Charles Michel). Exchanges with International Metrotone News. Distributed by Eclair Journal Dist.

France Actualites Gaumont. Managed by Agence Havas, French press agency. Exchanges with Gaumont-British news and Universal News. Distributed by G. F. F. A.

Actualites Fox-Movietone (20th Century-Fox).

Actualites Francaises Paramount (Paramount News).

International Metrotone News and Universal News have no distributing organizations in France and Exchange with French newsreels: Eclair and France Actualités.

Since January, RKO Radio has distributed a French edition (with commentary in France) of March of Time (under the name La Marche Du Temps). There is one issue per month.

NOTE I.—The above table includes only pictures over 1 hour projection time.

NOTE II.—Some foreign pictures (146) have been exhibited together in both original speaking version and dubbed version. They have been counted in each of their categories but only once in the general and final totals of the last column at the right of the table.

EXHIBITION IN FRANCE

As an effect of the quota system pictures exhibited in France are divided in two categories:

(1) Pictures of general exhibition, French talking pictures made in French or foreign studios, and foreign pictures dubbed in French.

(2) Pictures of restricted exhibition, foreign talkers shown in their original version with French sub-titles.

Pictures of restricted exhibition (263 in 1936, including 195 American, 25 British and 25 German) are shown mainly in the 30 specializing theatres of Paris. Twelve show the original versions first-run, the others second-run.

There are also some specializing theatres in the main towns of the Provinces, as Bordeaux, Marseilles, Lyons, Nice, Toulouse.

With the exception of the first-run theatres in Paris and in the main French towns, cinemas of general exhibition show double bill programs, composed of one French feature and an American dubbed film in support, or two dubbed American films.

There are now 4,701 theatres in France and North Africa (Algeria, Morocco and Tunisia), 3,457 wired, 775 silent.

Forty theatres opened in 1936: 15 in Paris, 16 in the Provinces, and 9 in North Africa.

The 15 new Paris cinemas included five newsreel cinemas, and four first-runs. The main one is the Normandie.

Receipts

In spite of difficulties met by exhibitors in the first six months of 1936 due to social troubles and the depression, general receipts increased in the past year. The total receipts for the French territory are estimated at 850 million francs ($37,000,000). The average admission price is 5.50 francs (23 cents).

Following is a comparison of receipts and averages for ten years.

Years	Gross receipts (million francs)	Theatre average (francs)
1926	146	895,000
1927	177	1,073,000
1928	204	1,173,000
1929	230	1,324,000
1930	308	1,804,000
1931	360	1,839,000
1932	359	1,719,000
1933	338	1,483,000
1934	320	1,285,000
1935	313	1,105,000
1936	330	1,107,000

The 1936 admission prices have been slightly increased. The range of prices in Paris first-runs is 15 to 20 francs, in the districts and provinces 5 to 10 francs.

Circuits

The main circuits are:

Circuit Pathe—About 50 theatres, 33 in Paris.

Circuit G. F. F. A. (Gaumont)—21 theatres, 17 in Paris, 13 in the Provinces, 1 in Brussels.

Circuit Siritzky—25 theatres in the Provinces and 1 in Paris.

Circuit Paramount—Three modern theatres: Le Paramount, Paris (1,900 seats); Opéra, Rheims (1,518); Familia, Lille (1,189).

Cineac Circuit—A circuit of 19 newsreel cinemas, owned and managed by the late Reginald Ford.

These theatres are in Paris, Brussels, Nice, Marseilles, Toulouse, The Hague, Amsterdam, Liège, Lille and even Athens.

Theatre Taxes

Cinema exhibitors must pay the following "entertainment taxes":

(1) Pauper tax: 10 per cent on the net receipts (the pauper tax in Paris was reduced to 8.75 per cent March 28, 1937).

(2) State tax (from 2.50 to 25 per cent on net receipts).

(3) Municipal taxes (from 1.25 per cent to 6.25 per cent on net receipts).

(4) Authors copyrights (music and non-synchronized records): from 1.10 per cent to 3.30 per cent on net receipts.

TRADE ORGANIZATIONS

The French Cinema Industry completed reorganization in the last months of 1936.

It is now headed by the Confederation Generale de la Cinematographie, of which the president is Jules Demaria. This Confederation includes the following branches;

(1) Chambre Syndicale des Industries Techniques de la Cinématographie (Technical Industries section). President, Chollat.

(2) Chambre Syndicale Française de la Production du Film (French Syndical Chamber of the Film Production). President, Félix Gandéra.

(3) Chambre Syndicale Française des Distributeurs de Film (Film Distributors). President, Louis Métayer.

(4) Union des Chambres Syndicales des Motion Picture Theatres (Exhibitors association). President, Raymond Lussiez.

IMPORTS INTO HOLLAND

by PH. DE SCHAAP
in Amsterdam

In 1936 there was 1,312,692 meters of censored film imported into the Dutch Indies, of this 1,280,136 meters in sound and 32,556 silent. The figures in 1935 were: total imports, 1,228,627 meters, sound 1,188,840 meters, silent 39,787 meters.

The quantity offered for approval by the Dutch-East-Indian censors increased 6.8 per cent over 1935. Taking the figure of 100 as an index figure for the year 1931, the import figures for sound and silent pictures were as follows:

	1931	1932	1933	1934	1935	1936
Sound	61.2	51.4	59.8	56.9	52.1	56.1
Silent	38.8	10.4	5.8	2.4	1.7	1.4

Imports classified according to country of origin, compared as follows:

Sweden	...	...	...	...	...	0.2
	100.0	61.8	65.6	59.3	53.8	57.5

Production in the Dutch Indies increased 50 per cent over 1935, and this figure certainly will be still higher in the future, with ANIF newsreel showing weekly in Holland, and giving more details of life in the Dutch Indies.

America delivers about 67 per cent of all pictures shown in the Dutch East Indies, and as in preceding years the number of pictures admitted for children increased, while the total of rejected films decreased. From a censor's point of view the quality of American product showed further improvement in 1936.

Importation of German films diminished.

UFA called a halt in April, 1937, to performances in the old-fashioned Rembrandt theatre (1400 seats).

A new theatre with modern equipment is being built on the same site, the center of Amsterdam (Rembrandtplein), to open in the autumn under the same name.

A board, strongly influenced by the Dutch governmental censors, published the results of a study to determine the best domestic productions in 1936.

The board was composed of Mr. D. van Staveren, president of the Board of Censors, C. S. Roem, vice-president of the Dutch Motion Picture Federation, and H. de Boer, critic of the Residentie-Bode, newspaper.

A golden plaquet was awarded to Loet C. Barnstijn's Filmproductie with "Merijntje Gijzen's Juegd," directed by Kurt Gerron, and to "20,000 Mijlen over Zee," an educational feature made with the collaboration of the Dutch government.

The managing board of the Dutch Motion Picture Federation is composed as follows:

President, D. Hamburger, Jr., Utrecht, exhibitor; Vice-president, C. S. Roem, The Hague, from Profilti; Secretary, S. Zondervan, Leeuwarden, exhibitor; Treasurer, W. K. THE YEAR IN HUNGARY

by ENDRE HEVESI

in Budapest

Of all sound pictures shown in Hungary in 1936, 17 per cent were locally made. This means a 6 per cent increase over production of 1935, and proves the steady growth of the activity which started in the year 1934. Naturally the branches of American film companies have been severely affected by this rise of the Hungarian industry.

From January 1, 1936, to the end of February, 1937, twenty-three full-length Hungarian-speaking features, 3 Hungarian "film-sketches" (films combined with stage shows, with the personal appearance of the screen actors) and 8 German-speaking pictures were produced in Hungary. Of this total of 34 films, 19 Hungarian features, 3 film sketches and 3 Hungarian made German films were released in Hungarian theatres by the end of February.

The audiences of Budapest first-run houses have shown growing interest in Hungarian films, and since theatres in country towns, despite two or three changes a week, use mostly Hungarian pictures, very little time is left for the release of foreign films.

But the decrease in importations is also due to the one-feature system, brought into practice August 1, 1936.

Double Features Barred

The government edict enforcing this measure was issued after violent altercations. Budapest first-run exhibitors had complained against the neighborhoods' double features. First-runs countered by issuing half-rate tickets for matinées, beginning at 4 p.m. on workdays and at 2 o'clock on Sundays. Then the small-theatre exhibitors complained. Finally the Ministry for Home Affairs intervened and issued a decre which, to all appearances, was to the advantage of first runs.

This edict ruled that theatres must not show more than one feature above the length of 1,200 meters (3,933 feet) in a program. The program of first-run and second-run deluxe theatres may not run more than a total of 3,800 meters (13,803 feet), including shorts, educationals and newsreels. The program of the subsequent neighborhood theatres may not be longer, than 3,400 meters (12,495 feet). This decree put an end to the two-feature system, but it also stopped the cut-rate matinée tickets in the first-runs.

The same edict also regulated the number of performances held per day. First-runs may not give more than three performances on week days, and four on Sundays; neighborhoods may give four and five respectively. The minimum price of tickets also was regulated for each category.

Time proved that the new decree was much more to the advantage of neighborhood exhibitors who had fought it. Patrons of first-runs who formerly visited matinées at half-price, now patronize neighborhoods. Patrons in the neighborhoods discovered that they were given much better projection, all the footage of the feature and several interesting shorts.

The booking prices of films have been only slightly raised.

Country town theatres had played only one full-length film anyway.

For distributors, however, the new system was a heavy blow. The 65 subsequent-runs of Budapest paid approximately as much for a foreign film as all the 348 theatres in country towns together. When these 65 abruptly began to release one feature in a program, many distributing companies were unable to sell some of their imported films. In many cases they helped themselves somewhat by cutting down full-length features to 1,200 meters (3,933 feet) and selling them as accompanying shorts.

Greater Selectivity

Owing to these conditions, in the last months of 1936 every branch used great caution in importing foreign films. Competition grew so keen that only really first-class foreign films had chances of being released in Hungarian theatres. By careful selection the branches of American companies did quite good business in 1936, in spite of all drawbacks.

Perhaps the greatest drawback is the problem of the subsequent release. A committee, recruited of members of both the distributors' and exhibitors' unions, decides every week which films should be shown in the Budapest neighborhood theatres. Six films which have finished their runs in deluxe theatres are chosen and the small exhibitor may pick any or all of these. Hungarian films may be shown simultaneously. Thus if two successful Hungarian films happened to be among the six, even the four imported films had very little chance of being released. Hence the greatest problem for American branches was to get subsequent runs.

Independents' Problems

The position of independent Hungarian distributors is very difficult, too. All of them have taken to producing at least one original Hungarian film a year, but exhibitors no longer can be compelled to buy second-rate imported films along with a Hungarian one. So independent distributors have taken to importing fewer but more carefully chosen films, and rental prices have dropped. Furthermore, independent distributors have found there are few really good foreign films not handled by the branches or representatives of American companies. Among the German films only the UFA products come into consideration, and these are distributed here through UFA's local branch. Austrian film production has deteriorated greatly. British pictures are not popular at all in Hungary. French films have risen in popularity, but only few are suited to the tastes of the Hungarian public, and these, owing to the demand, are very expensive.

Increased Production

No wonder, under the circumstances, that many independent distributors decided to reduce or to cease entirely their importation of foreign films and to invest their entire capital in Hungarian production. In 1937 this decision already is showing its effect. About 30 Hungarian films are planned for production in 1937 and independent distributors will reduce the number of their imported films accordingly.

This decrease of imports will be to the advantage of American companies which have local branches here, but the new pushing forward of Hungarian production will mean new difficulties for the Americans.

The law of 1935 held that 15 per cent of all films shown in Hungarian theatres must be in the Hungarian language.* In 1936 the quota was raised to 20 per cent. The demand for Hungarian pictures exceeds this obligatory 20 per cent, so that local films easily could be booked even in the case of an increasing production. It is possible that this year the quota again will be raised. It is even rumored that film production will be made obligatory for all distributors. This would mean that local branches no longer could buy import tickets from producers, but would be given permission to import foreign films only if they actually produce films here.

Permit Tickets for Shorts

Although a law obliging importers of foreign films to produce local films is only a distant project, changes in the system of contingentation tickets may be expected soon. The producer of each Hungarian film receives a premium of eight import tickets; he can use each of these tickets to import a foreign feature. The producer-distributors use these tickets partly for their own imports, but the majority is sold to American companies and to Hungarian film-importers. At the beginning of 1936, the market price of a permit ticket was 2,000 pengos ($400), so that producers received about 16,000 pengos ($3,200) as a premium from the government for every locally produced picture. Owing to increased film production, there was such a great supply of tickets that their price fell to 1,400 pengos ($280). In this way the producer received $900 to $1,000 less subsidy from the state than the $3,200 which he had counted upon as the equivalent of his eight-ticket premium, a fact which greatly upset calculations. This problem will be adjusted this year.

Another reform introduced in 1936 was that even short films under 1,200 meters (with the exception of newsreels) could be imported only by producing permit tickets. This law was intended to further the production of local shorts and educationals. Every Hungarian short film was given a premium of 5 to 20 "short film tickets," depending on its length, each ticket selling for 100 to 140 pengos ($20 to $28). These tickets were purchased mostly by the local branches of American companies who completely ruled the short film market. Owing to the one-feature-system, short films are much in demand.

Mickey Mouse is still the most popular short film hero, but Popeye, who first appeared here in 1936, is also liked by the public.

Private Compensation Allowed

No improvement has come about in the matter of foreign payments. Owing to the strict currency policy of the Hungarian National Bank, which does not consider films to be very necessary import articles, it is still extremely difficult for independent distributors to obtain sufficient foreign currency to pay for their imported films. The local branches of American companies, too, have great difficulties and several have considerable sums accumulated here on the blocked credit accounts. This money can be used only with permission of the National Bank. But in 1936 the American companies at last succeeded in getting the money out of the country with the help of private compensation procedure. This method is complicated and expensive, but it is the only one which enables the local branch offices to transfer money to New York.

The system works this way:

The Hungarian National Bank gives 5 pengos for a dollar. The export of certain articles, however, could not be made to pay if the dollar would be exchanged at the rate of 5 pengos only, so the exporter refrains from exporting rather than do it at a loss. The National Bank, however, insists on increasing Hungarian exports as far as possible. So, in cases when it would not pay to export goods for a price paid in foreign currency and exchanged at the official rate, the Bank allows private compensation. It permits the exporter to find someone who has blocked money accumulated in the country and to sell to this person or company his foreign currency assets at a higher rate of exchange than the National Bank is prepared to pay. The exporter's bank, for instance, looks for a partner who has blocked money in this country, in this case the local branch of an American film company.

For example, the bank acting for a manufacturer of furniture proposes to the local office of an American picture company to buy his outstanding foreign claims, worth $5,000.

The manufacturer and the manager of the film branch come to a free agreement as to the price for which the outstanding foreign debts in Hungarian currency are to be redeemed. The film office will have to pay about seven pengos instead of the official rate of exchange for a dollar, but it pays the price because this is the only way in which it can transfer money to America.

More Theatres in Hungary

The number of motion picture theatres in Hungary increased in 1936. From 426 theatres active in the whole country in 1935, the figure jumped to 487 in 1936. There is not one silent theatre in Hungary now.

The old Corso theatre, seating 300, was rebuilt into a beautiful, modern first-run theatre holding 800. Permits have been issued for several smart theatres to be built in Budapest.

Changes are expected in the management of Budapest first-run theatres, especially in the Gero circuit. This circuit controls eight of Budapest's 15 deluxe theatres, partly by being in partnership with several permit holders and partly by supplying them with films. Gero's contract with the permit holder of his leading theatre expires this year and will not be renewed, says the Minister for Home Affairs. Gero plans to include very influential individuals in his company in order to win a renewal of this contract. If Gero does not succeed in this, several theatres will leave Gero and work independently, to the great joy of distributors and exhibitors.

Modern and Inexpensive Studios

The two Budapest studios, Hunnia and Filmiroda, were modernized in 1936. A third studio has been built on the Hunnia premises. Hunnia is now the biggest and most modern studio in Central Europe. The two Budapest studios are equipped to make 40 films a year. Owing to the continuous production work in the studios, production expenses have dropped so that Budapest is the least expensive city in Europe for film production. That is why several foreign producers came here in 1936 to make films in Budapest.

Pictures Produced

The following films were produced in Budapest from January 1, 1936, until the end of February, 1937, the language and producer also being named:

"Donaumelodien" (German), Cinéphon, Berlin;
"Be True Unto Death" (Legy jó mindhalálig, Hungarian), Lux;
"Café Moskow" (Hungarian), Patria;
"Man Under the Bridge" (Ember a hid alatt, Hungarian), Sonor;
"Two Hundred A Month" (Havi 200 fix, Hungarian), Mozgóképipari;
"Madonna in Warenhaus" (German), Atlantis-Thekla;
"I Did It" (En voltam, Hungarian), Ufa;
"Maedchenpensionat" (German) Atlantis, Vienna;
"Wo die Lerche singt" (German), Atlantis-Thekla;
"Mircha" (German), Rora, Vienna;
"Foreign Traffic" (Forog az idegen—film sketch in Hungarian with screen and stage parts), Antal;
"Sensation" (Szenzáció, Hungarian), Filmiroda;
"Cobweb" (Pókháló, Hungarian), Bioscop;
"Exception to the Rule" (Tisztelet a kivételnek, Hungarian), Focus;
"High-Born Lady" (A méltóságos kisasszony, Hungarian), Mozgóképipari;
"Anniversary" (Evforduló, Hungarian), Reflektor;
"Half-Price Honeymoon" (Nászut féláron, Hungarian), Lux;

"Pay Up, Madame" (Fizessen nagysád, Hungarian), Focus;
"Mysterious Stranger" (Titokzatos idegen, Hungarian), Mozgóképipari;
"Take Charge of My Wife" (Rád bizom a feleségem, Hungarian), Opus;
"Eine Insel Wird Entdeckt" (German), Berna, Bern.

Ten per cent out of these twenty may be imported films dubbed into Hungarian; but since synchronized films are not at all popular in Hungary, foreign films are not dubbed.*

LEGISLATION IN ITALY

by VITTORIO MALPASSUTI

in Rome

Intervention of the State in the motion picture industry in Italy, although started only two years ago, already has given results which are satisfactory in every national sense, and on the basis of the new organization, cinematography is out to reconquer the European primacy it once held.

In the legislative field, motion pictures have been the subject of a number of measures all aimed at the common purpose of improving the national industry.

Among the most important legislative provisions by the Italian Government are those regarding the State credit and that of the banks. Such provisions constitute a concession on the part of the State of advances in favor of the producers of national films and authorize establishment at the Banca del Lavoro (Work Bank) of an autonomous section, for motion picture credit, to make loans for Italian film production.

Another provision is that of inauguration of the Ente Nazionale delle Industrie Cinematografiche (E.N.I.C.), authorized to assume and transfer actionary participations in motion picture concerns.

The activity of this organization gives in the motion picture field an impartial exploitation of national product in its natural market.

Another provision in favor of national production is that to every producer of a national film there is granted for every film exemption of the dubbing tax for three foreign films. If it is considered that such tax is L.30,000 for every foreign film the advantage offered to the producer amounts to Lit.90,000.

The Italian Government has fixed the annual sum of two million lire to be distributed as prizes to the producers of the best films of the year.

The following prizes have been assigned for the best national films of the year 1935-36:

Scarpe Al Sole, L.300,000; Passaporto Rosso, 250,000; Aldebaran, 180,000; Re Burlone, 180,000; Ma Non E Una Cosa Seria, 150,000; Ginevra Degli Almieri, 150,000; Daro' Un Milione, 100,000; Nozze Vagabonde, 75,000; Fiordalisi D'Oro, 75,000; Amo Te Sola, 75,000; Non Ti Conosco Piu', 75,000; Aria Del Continente, 75,000; Sette Giorni All' Altro Mondo, 50,000; Anonima Roylott, 50,000; Milizia Territoriale, 50,000; Una Donna Tra 2 Mondi, 50,000; Lohengrin, 25,000; Serpente A Sonagli, 25,000; Fiat Voluntas Dei, 25,000; Amore, 25,000; Conquistatori D'Anime, 15,000.

The financial success which the Italian films have derived in their own markets can be considered more than satisfactory. From September 1, 1935, to August 31, 1936, receipts of both Italian and foreign films are the following:

Title	Number of Days Shown	Net Receipts
Casta Diva	3,698	L. 5,954,656
Merry Widow	2,918	5,440,975
Aldebaran	2,035	4,084,748
Conte di Montecristo	2,535	4,159,572
Curly Top	1,360	3,941,177
Little Colonel	2,240	3,746,226
Resurrection	2,552	3,611,418
David Copperfield ..	1,788	3,555,038
Anna Karenina	1,643	3,475,809
Scarpe al Sole.....	2,248	3,360,097
Passaporto Rosso....	2,356	3,181,336
Non ti Conosco Piu'.	1,670	3,552,998
Fiat Voluntas Dei....	2,527	3,142,928
Aria Del Continente.	1,626	3,152,961
Re Burlone	1,930	3,040,777

Of the 15 films cited, 8 are Italian and 7 American. Bearing in mind that the 8 Italian films represent 25 percent of the productive output, while for the same period the American films reach 4 percent of the foreign imported and shown films, it can be deduced that as a percentage advantage on the block of films presented the Italian occupy first place.

With institution of the General Direction for Cinematography at the Ministry for Press and Propaganda the Italian cinematographic production has been considerably increased and is becoming better year by year.

In fact, against a production of 32 films during 1934-35 and 35 during 1935-36, in the season of 1936-37 about 66 films are being made, of which 32 have been finished, 10 are being made and about 24 already planned and approved.

With such production, the increase and improvement of which will certainly not be delayed, Italy hopes to be able to launch an output of films suitable for the foreign markets also, besides having for herself a sufficient number of films to sustain to a great extent her own needs.

From the indexes of importation for the current year it appears that out of 236 films from abroad 102 are American, 52 German, 20 French, 8 Austrian, 7 English, 4 Hungarian, and 1 Russian.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer heads the list of companies importing films with 40, Fox follows with 30, Paramount 10, Warner 8, I.C.I. 7, United Artists 5, Minerva and E.IA. 1 each.

PROGRESS IN JAPAN

by H. TOMINAGA
in Tokyo

Handicapped, yet making fast progress from the start, Japan's motion picture industry is striving hard to find its way out of unbusinesslike procedure and operation.

Particularly in the last year, with the advent of the Takarazuka (called "Toho," in brief) interest controlled by Ichizo Kobayashi, leading businessman, other large film companies began to apply modern principles of operation. In the producing and distributing fields, the year 1936 saw the door thrown open to resuscitation of old film interests to meet the challenge of Toho.

Small independent concerns found that their salvation lay in mergers.

Some of our leading actor-producers, such as Minoru Takata, Tsumasaburo Bando, Takako Iriye, who had owned their own studios, joined Toho under new contracts to work as actors in its regular employ.

Nikkatsu was about to identify itself with Toho-PCL-J.O. Studio coalition, already existing as a triple producing-distributing unit, when there came an abrupt setback to Nikkatsu in an embezzlement case involving K. Hori, managing director, and several other executives. Soon afterwards, Nikkatsu was thrown into a financial crisis. Uzumasa Hassei immediately took mandatory control of Nikkatsu, and it required a half year to get the company back to its normal operating basis.

Meanwhile Toho-PCL-J.O. Studio went on strengthening its united forces.

Then Mr. Kobayashi, head of Toho, who first had tried to finance Nikkatsu back to financial stability, was superseded by T. Ohtani, president of Shochiku Company, who took on himself the liabilities of 2,500,000 Yen which Nikkatsu had owed to Chiba-Godo Bank.

Thus the tables were turned. Nikkatsu ever since has cast its lot with the Shochiku-Shinko bloc, though ostensibly holding its own under new management and its long-standing firm title of Nikkatsu.

Today distribution of Japanese pictures divides into two groups, the one the Toho-PCL-J.O. Studio, the other the Shochiku-Shinko-Nikkatsu. Yesterday's competitor is today allied with Shochiku and now is expected a furious fight for supremacy between the two triple alliances, and the Japanese film enterprise is improved thereby, because of the availability of larger capital.

Shochiku planned to build a magnificent theatre at Shibuya, Tokyo, with the capital of 500,000 Yen, while Toho was trying to acquire the Toyoko theatre in the same town. A similar competitive fight for big theatre construction started in Osaka, Kobe and Kyoto.

With the growth of Toho, Shochiku undertook consolidation of Shochiku Show Company with Shochiku Cinema. Out of this, on October 30th, there appeared Shochiku Company, the biggest stage-play and cinema company in Japan, with a capital of 37,000,000 Yen.

Shochiku at first did not necessarily turn out as outstanding pictures, from its studios at Ohtuna. as those produced while the studios were at Kamata. Now, however, the studios have been improved in all departments for large-scale production.

Shinko, an affiliate of Shochiku, experimented with one system and management after another the whole of the year. The secession of Chiyezo Production and Rengo Eiga (United Films) was a serious reverse to Shinko, then hurrying along its 1936-37 production schedule. To crown all, Shinko severed relations with Minoru Takata and Tsumasaburo Bando, who long had identified themselves with Shinko as producer-actors.

Now enlisted under the banner of Shochiku Shinko is expected to aim at production of the same class and caliber as Makino or Daito product which is popular, particularly among the mass film-going public.

The second-class producing-distributing companies, Daito, Makino, Kyokuto and Zensho, were active in their fight for theatre control in the past year. Daito, Kyokuto and Zensho vied for predominance in the silent product field, but Daito, which produced 127 silent pictures last year, is turning to sound this year.

To summarize, following are other outstanding events of 1936 in our film industry, in chronological sequence, follows:

Edict to Raise Korea Quota

The cinema control plan in force in Korea since 1935 stipulates that one-third of the pictures in a theatre program must be Japanese product. The Korean Government, however, declared early last year that commencing Jan. 1, 1937, this ratio should be revised from one-third to more than one-half. Despite conferences at Keyo in which foreign companies' protests were heard, opinion was that efforts should be made to elevate the quality of Japanese pictures before eliminating foreign pictures. Not only in Korea, but also in Japan Proper, movements with similar purposes were reported as inevitable to protect the Japanese motion picture market.

Studio Talent's Associations

The Cameramen's Association initiated an effort to enlarge its organization under the new title of Japanese Association of Motion Picture Technicians. The enlarged association includes not only cameramen but developing and sound recording engineers among its 200 members.

Following establishment of the Japanese Association of Motion Picture Technicians, associations of directors and scenarists were formed.

Cultural Films Popular

The Japanese Motion Picture Association presented a petition to the government for compulsory exhibition of cultural pictures. In keeping with this move, most studios established cultural picture departments.

On the other hand, the leading newspaper offices, such as Tokyo Asahi, Tokyo Nichi-nichi, Osaka Mainichi and Yomuri, began devoting their production efforts largely to production of newsreels, as well as cultural pictures.

To a survey made by Kokusai Eiga Shimbun among typical theatres, of all classes, 99 per cent replied that their programs had room for cultural pictures, while the remaining one per cent said they used newsreels on current events.

All agreed that producers should do their part to meet the demand of general exhibitors by supplying such productions made on a high standard of educational content.

An Ultimatum on Product

Restriction of foreign motion pictures was broached in an abrupt action by the Shochiku and Toho companies. The two concerns called the sales managers of ten foreign units to a gathering at Tokyo Kaikan, and gave them a joint statement that although they formerly contracted for one or more additional program pictures with each special feature, they henceforth would not contract for any pictures beyond the practical need for first-run release.

This move was a matter for serious consideration by distributors, particularly such as Paramount, RKO and Towa Shoji, which had made block contract arrangements.

Since early last fall, most of the large foreign productions imported have been released almost without a hitch, while program pictures have received comparatively scant attention.

Joint Censorship System

The Home Office of Japan finally set up a "joint censorship" system at an inter-office conference, attended by Minister Ushio, Vice-ministers Yuzawa and Nabeshima, Councillor Kimotsuki, Director Kayaba of the Police Bureau.

Hereafter a picture shall be censored first by all the designated censors in charge before final permission is granted or a ban proclaimed. Importation is to be barred to any pictures (1) divulging the interior of the royal palace, (2) featuring the military in comic cinematization, and (3) having too many scenes of suggestive kissing.

Pictures rejected under enforcement of this new censorship method included Warner's "Sons O' Guns" and Columbia's "King Steps Out." "Things to Come" was about to feel the ax but finally was released at Taisho-Kan and Nippon Gekijo of Tokyo. Paramount's "Princess Comes Across" was passed after additional cutting. The new principle is to lay stress upon the theme rather than scenes.

Taxes Protested

A nationwide movement for the abolition of show taxes gathered force.

The government last year approved the taxation increase and reform plan of Dr. E. Baba, minister of finance. As the plan included abolition and correction of various items of local miscellaneous taxes including the show tax, it at first was generally acceptable, but when it was made clear that the ministerial authorities of finance and of the interior were disposed to allow the local governments to establish taxes on film attendance in order to cover up the loss accruing from the show taxes being abolished, the exhibitors raised strong objections. The Japanese Association of Motion Pictures petitioned the taxation bureau of the Finance Office to disapprove of the attendance tax.

"The New Earth" in Japan

In February, 1936, Dr. Arnold Fanck, German director, arrived in Japan at the invitation of N. Kawakita, head of Towa Shoji, Y. Osawa, head of J. O. Studio Ltd. and C. Kabayama, to produce Japan's unique export picture "The New Earth," a story of the Japan of today and of yesterday, which took the year to produce, with an expense of over 660,000 Yen.

For the heroine he chose Setsuko Hara, 17, of the Nikkatsu Studio, and for the male lead, Isamu Kosugi, an idol of Japanese movie-goers. Among supporting players were Sessue Hayakawa, Ruth Eweler, German actress, and Haruyo Ichikawa. Location trips were taken to almost every part of Japan. This film marks the beginning of a new era in the Japanese industry.

Control in Manchukuo

The national cinema control, initiated by the Manchukuo Government, included establishment of a new national film company with a captal of 5,000,000 Yen, half undertaken by the government, half by the South Manuchuria Railway Company, and with full control over all fields of the business in Manchukuo, and including production, distribution, exportation and importation of pictures, promotion of sales in foreign countries, dissemination of propaganda, establishment of theatre circuits, guidance of children, compulsory exhibition of cultural pictures, increase and control of theatres.

Statistics of Japanese Production

Shochiku—Total 99: Ohfuna Studio, 50; Shimokamo, 35; Uta Production, 3; Daiichi Eiga, 11.

Nikkatsu — Total 90: Tamagawa Studio, 37; Kyoto, 30; Uzumasa Hassei, 10; Chiyezo Production, 7; Tokyo Hassei, 6.

Shinko—Total 93: At Ohizumi Studio, 38; Kyoto, 30; Kanjuro Production, 11; Bantsuma Production, 7; Takata Production, 7.

Toho—Total 29: By P.C.L., 26; J. O. Studio, 3.

Daito—Total 106: Silent, 60; Sound, 46.

Other Producing Units—Total 114: Makino, 46; Koyo Eiga, 16; Kyokuto Eiga, 36; Zensho Kinema, 11.

The grand total is 531 productions.

In 1936 there was an increase of 87 productions over the 444 for 1935, and 132 more than the 399 for 1934.

American European Releases

The total number of American and European pictures released in Japan in 1936 was 343, an increase of 39 over the 304 for 1935. There were 205 released through the first-runs of Shochiku circuit and 138 in Toho theatres.

PROGRESS IN MEXICO

in Mexico City

Things have brightened up noticeably for the industry in Mexico after a speckled period in 1936. The industry was weighed down at the outset of last year by a strike started in 1935 against the eight large American companies doing business in this country. But there was a good and rapid comeback. American films profited, for the public was more eager than ever for Hollywood product after the four months famine which the strike had occasioned.

Productions from the United States films continued to be far ahead of any others on the Mexican market. Their ratio last year, according to the Mexican Motion Picture Producers Union, was 580 to 20 domestic films, with European product trailing.

The strike had another beneficial result: it put an end to general labor troubles. About the only difficulty of that kind was the walkout of employees of National Motion Picture Production Company, maker of Mexico's first talking picture. The company's studio was still closed as this was written. But it had not seriously affected domestic production. Other studios in Mexico City were busy. There was no menace of labor troubles for the industry at this writing, though several other activities, such as petroleum and sugar, were not getting along so very well with their workers. There was a sentiment that, as things now stood, Americans considered Mexico far too profitable a field to quit cold.

The past year witnessed abandonment by Mexican producers of short subjects, except those sponsored by the government or great commercial companies. This action was prompted by the policy of Hollywood virtually to give away shorts in Latin America for advertising purposes. The federal government made several short subjects of a scenic and folklore nature last year as part of its program to win foreign tourists. It was continuing that work this year and was in addition sponsoring a series of shorts depicting the highlights of leading Mexican industries, for exhibition at home and abroad. The National Railways of Mexico, this country's greatest railroad, also was making films of beauty spots for its foreign tourist drive. General Motors of Mexico spent $90,000 to make 20,000 feet of travelogué of the international highway between Mexico City and Laredo, Texas, places of interest along it and high spots of the Mexican capital.

Home production in 1936 was about 20 pictures, all features. The most prominent was "Alia en el Rancho Grande" (Way Down on the Rancho Grande), easily the best picture made in Mexico by Mexicans. It had an excellent reception at home and abroad. The 1937 schedule for domestic makers was from 30 to 40 films. Mexican producers were looking more to foreign markets. Practically all new films have titles in English. Some of them have captions in German and French.

The home industry suffered some loss from the liquidation of Cinemategrafica Latino Americano, S.A. (CLASA) which had made a pretentious start in 1934. It was able to complete and distribute only one of the several features it had planned to make—"Vamonous Con Pancho Villa" ("Let's Go With Pancho Villa"). A syndicate was formed early in 1937 to rehabilitate CLASA and resume production.

There was government aid for the domestic industry, though it was not as extensive as the industry had asked. A proposition to fix exhibition quotas on the ratio of at least one home made subject for five imported, to limit importations of films and forbid a distributor from representing more than one company, was tabled because of the diversity of opinion in the industry.

The cinemas that present stage shows for ten consecutive days each month were allowed a reduction in the tax on their daily gross from the ordinary 13 per cent, to 8 per cent during the period of the shows.

A law caustically criticized by leading Mexico City newspapers demands that cinemas must exhibit at least two made in Mexico pictures, features or shorts, a month.

The Mexico City municipal government rejected the plea of the Mexican Producers Union that it act toward getting the domestic industry more cinemas, and even theatres, in which to show their wares, and grant them preferential tax rates. However, the industry in the national capital was allowed exemption from fiscal taxes for five years, starting January 1, 1937.

What promises to be a new era for Mexican producers opened with the making of their first picture in colors, "Novillero" ("Novice Bull Fighter"). The picture is based upon a popular Mexican song of the same name and features a star matador.

Confidence in the situation was manifested by the opening of five high class cinemas in 1936, the starting of work on three others and the formulation of plans to build a de luxe downtown theatre and a high grade neighborhood house this year.

CYCLE IN POLAND

by JOSEPH FRYD
in Warsaw

The motion picture year in Poland divides into three periods: first, from the 1st of January to the 1st of May; second, from the 1st of May to the 1st of September, and third, from September until the end of December. The summer "quiet season" was very uninteresting. In the first period of 1936 the cinemas and distributors were doing good business, in the third period receipts went down as in the times of the most severe crisis.

Several new theatres were opened in 1936. There now are 70 in Warsaw alone.

The 17 first-run cinemas in Warsaw were hit hardest by the slump. In the second-run cinemas a picture is shown for 8-12 days and on good terms, which enables the exhibitor to charge low admission prices. They in this way become keen competitors to the first-run houses. The big cinemas now often demand a longer interval between the first and second release of the film.

The third period was just as bad for the distributors. American pictures which had the biggest success during that period were "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town" (Columbia), and "The Charge of the Light Brigade" (Warner). In the provinces the following pictures were among the outstanding successes: "Rose Marie" (Metro), "Under Two Flags" (20th Century-Fox), "San Francisco" (MGM), "Story of Louis Pasteur" (Warner), and the Shirley Temple films. Among the French films "Mayerling" was a big draw. However, many of the important pictures, like "Romeo and Juliet," "Swing Time," "Born to Dance" and "Man of the Moment," failed to meet expectations.

The future of the distributors does not look too well. The local distributing offices are turning their attention to Polish pictures.

Poland produced 21 features. The biggest 'hits' were: "Social Leper," "Barbara Radziwillowna" and "Yiddle With His Fiddle" (in Yiddish, starring Molly Picon).

The cost of production of a Polish film approximates Zlotys 100,000 ($20,000). While this cost is very low, the producers' earnings are negligible, as the market is very small and there are few export possibilities. The majority of Polish films are shown in the Polish colonies in the United States and in Palestine.

Film Imports

There were 488 films imported into Poland in ten months, their total footage amounting to about 578,832 meters. Seventy per cent consists of American films. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Warner Bros. and 20th Century-Fox brought over up to 40 full-length pictures each.

Second place on the import list was taken by Germany. French production was third.

Censorship

Censorship is under the Home Office. The chief censor is Józef Relidzynski and the office-manager Felix Woytysiak. There is no official prohibition of Russian films, but a quiet understanding exists between the importers and official circles. The fear of the Russian influence is so great that any film with a strong social tendency, even not a Russian one, is invariably banned. Besides, the Polish Board of Censors bans gangster pictures, films dealing with the subject of revolution and those thought to ridicule the military forces. MGM's "Born to Dance" was forbidden, because a naval officer was considered the subject of ridicule. Only by insertion of a title to the effect that everything in the film is pure fiction and that the action takes place in an imaginary country was the film passed.

Censorship is very severe toward home produtions as well. Some of the Polish films had great difficulties, for example "Wierna Rzeka" (The Faithful River), based on the story by the late famous Polish writer Stefan Zeromski.

Taxes

The cinemas in Poland pay the following taxes:

1. Municipal Tax (Entertainment Tax). In large towns up to 30 per cent of the entire turnover, in smaller towns 20, 15 or 10 per cent, according to population. The so-called classification of films has been abolished and the tax is unified irrespective of the films' artistic value.
2. Income Tax.
3. Turnover Tax.

The distributing offices, in addition to duty on films imported, must pay income tax and the turnover tax. There are also other less important taxes, like the house tax and winter help tax. Polish films pay 5 per cent municipal tax, sometimes are free of tax.

German Activities

One of the German companies representing UFA has bought the cinema Filharmonia in Warsaw. Now another German company has opened in Warsaw under the name Polish Tobis and hired the cinema Studio to show German pictures only. Also showing German productions are the Hollywood and the Roma. Besides, Polish Tobis is making a film in Poland under the title "Diplomatic Wife."

In some parts of the country (Poznan, Pomorze and Malopolska districts) the cinemas are in the hands of exhibitors who do not care for any kind of boycott. This is the German-speaking area and therefore English talkers are not liked. The little business which the American films have been doing since September, 1936, is being used as an argument by competitors. Such films as "Romeo and Juliet," "Born to Dance," "Fury," "Swing Time," failed to please. The biggest successes were "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town" and "The Charge of the Light Brigade," in large towns, and "Rose Marie" and "Story of Louis Pasteur" in the provinces. Shirley Temple films obtained very good results: also "Under Two Flags."

Paramount and Universal did not play an important part in this season's business.

Now when the American producers have liquidated their branches in Spain, when in Germany and Austria very few foreign pictures are distributed, and when every foreign picture to be distributed in Italy must be dubbed into the native language, every remaining market has unusual significance.

Old Faithful Geyser, nature's headliner in Yellowstone National Park, puts on a four-minute show and repeats it exactly every 67 minutes. It has been doing this for at least 100 years. During its brief act this miracle of nature hurls more than 200,000 gallons of boiling water into the sky for a distance of over 150 feet.

MIRACLES DON'T "JUST HAPPEN"

Nature spent centuries on the process of creating the miracle of Old Faithful.

E.R.P.I. spent years in the commercial adaptation of a revolutionary principle of sound reproduction known as MIRROPHONIC. Like Old Faithful, MIRROPHONIC is a product of time—it is a result of long research by Bell Telephone Laboratories and Western Electric in perfecting a reproducing system first conceived in the form of Stereophonic or "third-dimensional" sound.

MIRROPHONIC is the direct commercial outgrowth of the historic Stereophonic principle—first publicly demonstrated four years ago in Philadelphia, later in New York, Hollywood, and recently, in Miami.

MIRROPHONIC is readily adaptable to future advances in the art. If you now have Western Electric, it may be installed on a convenient step-by-step modification plan.

More than a thousand exhibitors, who have installed MIRROPHONIC, used its powerful exploitation campaign, now enjoy increased BOX OFFICE DOLLARS.

Old Faithful and MIRROPHONIC never fail to come through with a good show on time—and with

"A THRILL FOR YOUR EARS!"

International MOTION PICTURE ALMANAC

The Radio and the Screen; Personalities on the Air

Radio continues to draw nearly all of its "big name" performers, for commercial programs and otherwise, from the motion picture talent rosters of Hollywood. Virtually every important Hollywood star or featured player now appears on the air, for a price, either in a series of programs or, more frequently, as "guest star." Typical of film player, or film executive, appearances on the air at the end of the 1936-37 season, are those which follow, bearing in mind, of course, that many of Hollywood's screen players also appear either on the stage or in concerts—radio takes them all.

CODE: All air performances following were by actors or actresses, unless otherwise specified. (G) means Guest Appearance, and (S) indicates where the player is appearing in a series of broadcasts. Next appears the name of the air program, the name of the advertiser or program sponsor, and then the product being advertised by the program. At the end of each listing, the NBC means National Broadcasting network, CBS indicates Columbia Broadcasting System, MBS stands for Mutual Broadcasting, and individual single-station appearances are identified by the station's call letters.

Better Theatres

has this job sharply cut out for it: To bring to motion picture exhibition the information, the ideas, the counsel needed for the economical care and effective operation of its theatres. BETTER THEATRES' interests are exclusively those of the building in which, and the machinery by which the motion picture reaches its vast audience. Obviously, there's no job in the motion picture business more important.

Hence the reception of BETTER THEATRES as guide in the selection of theatre equipment, in theatre planning, in operating methods. Nearly all theatres in the United States and Canada receive it every four weeks—on paid subscription.* The independent circuit and individual exhibitor especially appreciates, of course, the job that BETTER THEATRES does. To them it brings the services that only a few producer-owned circuits can provide in large measure for themselves. And the independent circuits and individual exhibitors operate over 87% of all the theatres in the United States.

* BETTER THEATRES edited and printed as a separate publication, is circulated as Section Two of Motion Picture Herald, with a net paid circulation blanketing the industry, as attested by the Audit Bureau of Circulations.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Reviews of progress in the motion picture industry are published semi-annually by the Progress Committee of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers. These contain references to the major portion of the technical papers and patents issued relating to all branches of the industry. The annual review of photographic progress published by the Society of Chemical Industry (British) in their volume, Reports of the Progress of Applied Chemistry, contains many references to cinematography.

Abstracts of all papers published in the Transactions and in the JOURNAL OF THE SOCIETY OF MOTION PICTURE ENGINEERS from 1916 to June, 1930, are given in a volume entitled Aims and Accomplishments of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers. A subject and index of all papers published 1930-1935 (incl.) in the J. S. M. P. E. has appeared.

BURTON HOLMES FILMS, Incorporated, devotes the majority of its efforts to the production of sales promotional, commercial, industrial, advertising, and scientific motion pictures. Periodical production of short subjects, together with 16 mm. library films, and medical films, rounds out its program. In the commercial film line the company also produces silent and talking slide films for dealer training and direct selling purposes. The company operates what it considers the most completely equipped motion picture laboratory between New York and Hollywood; and as well as operating as a producer of motion pictures, does a great deal of service work for other Middle Western producers. It is equipped with RCA ultra-violet "High Fidelity" sound recording equipment, both studio and truck installation; and is equipped with an RCA "High Fidelity" Optical Sound Reduction Printer for making 16 mm. sound-on-film prints. In 1935 developing machines for 35 mm. and 16 mm. positive were installed and the company claims the largest release print capacity of any laboratory in the Middle West.
